CONTRA DEUM, JUS ET JUSTITIAM
THE TRIAL OF BARTOLOMEO QUERINI, BAILO AND CAPITANO OF NEGREPONTE (14th c.)*

In the course of a recent research trip to the Venetian State Archives I came across a group of hitherto unknown legal documents relating to the criminal action brought by the Avogadori di Comun against Bartolomeo Querini, bailo and capitano of Negroponte between the years 1372 and 1374. Querini was prosecuted upon his return to Venice and subsequently convicted for breach of duties specified in his Commission and offenses against the State.¹ The case which deals with events both in and outside the island of Euboea or Negroponte – as it was better known to the Latins – involving some of the most important figures of Latin-

* I would like to thank Professor Chryssa Maltezou and Professor David Jacoby for their comments and many helpful suggestions. I am also grateful to Anthony Pardos for checking the transcription of the documents.

1. On the various duties of the Avogadori di Comun, see F. C. Lane, Venice, A Maritime Republic, Baltimore 1973, p.100; see also A. Viggiano, Governanti e Governati, Legittimità del potere ed esercizio dell'autorità sovrana nello Stato veneto della prima età moderna, Treviso 1993, pp. 51-146. The Avogadori di Comun were specifically charged with bringing criminal action against colonial officials who acted against their Commissions and Capitularies. On the procedure followed in cases involving overseas officials, see the chapter from the capitulary of the Advocates of the Commune, dated December 2, 1376, published by D. E. Queller, «Newly Discovered Early Venetian Legislation on Ambassadors», in Two Studies on Venetian Government, Geneva 1977, pp. 29-30, n° 24; cf. F. Thiriet, La Romanie vénitienne au Moyen Âge, Paris 1959, pp. 198-203. I have been unable to locate Bartolomeo Querini's Commission, nor for that matter the Commission of any previous bailo of Negroponte. However, numerous laws passed by the Maggior Consiglio and instructions from the Senate refer to the election, salary, duties and responsibilities of the bailo of Negroponte, see Thiriet, Délibérations des Assemblées vénitiennes concernant la Romanie, v. 1-2, Paris - The Hague 1966-1971, passim.

dominated Greece, is of particular interest because it reflects the Republic's interests in the region and its concern about the safety and well-being of its colony. Moreover, it affords further indication of the failings of overseas governors and of the efficacy of the system devised by Venice to police its officials.²

The first to take an interest in this criminal trial was Karl Hopf, who, however, gave only a partial and incomplete account of the case, based chiefly on the sentence of the court, marred by many errors, especially with regard to dates.³ The scope of this paper is to present anew the main facts of the case and shed some additional light on the history of Negroponte and the surrounding regions, particularly in view of the newly discovered documents. No claim to exhaustiveness is made, given the limited time and space of this presentation.

The documents which contain the new evidence are collected in a file bearing on the cover the indication: «Querini Bartolomeo bailo e capitano a Negroponte, violenza contro Nicola dalle Carceri di una figlia di Nicolo Sanudo che voleva fosse sposata a un proprio figlio, 1374».⁴ They are the depositions of ten witnesses, taken between December 1374 and January 1375, and a rough draft of the bill of indictment dated January 4, 1375.

The Venetians were well acquainted with the island of Negroponte long before the Fourth Crusade. Situated just a few miles off the coast of central Greece, the island was a main stop for ships on route to Constantinople and an important market-centre for merchandise coming from the mainland. However, although the

In addition to the sentence Hopf cites the following authorities: 1) A.S.V., Maggior Consiglio, Novella, f. 361, copy, dated July 22, 1375 [(= f. 163 in the original register, according to which the date should read July 12, 1375)], which contains two sentencing proposals put forward by the public prosecutors and the Signoria, respectively, and voted on by the Maggior Consiglio at the same session; for a summary of this decision, see F. Thiriet, Assemblées, v. 2, n° 823; and 2) Stefano Magno, Annali Veneti, v. 4, Ms. Cicogna 367, Civico Museo Correr, f. 39v [= K. partition treaty in 1204 assigned the northern and southern part of the island (Oreos and Karystos) to Venice, various circumstances prevented her from taking immediate steps to enter into possession of these territories. The Venetian claims on Negroponte were subsequently ignored by Boniface, marquis of Montferrat, who took over the island and, shortly before his death in 1205, divided it into three large fiefs which he granted to three Veronese lords, known also as triarchs. Only, Euripos (pres. Chalkis), the capital of the island, also called Negroponte by the Latins, remained undivided and was held in common by the triarchs.⁵

In 1209, Ravano dalle Carceri, who by then had managed to secure «possession of the whole island through a combination of death and disinterest of his fellow Veronese lords», became liegeman of the Latin emperor of Constantinople.⁶ Earlier the same year, he sought the suzerainty of the doge of Venice, as a means to protect his interests against emperor Henry. In return, Ravano undertook to provide the Venetians in the city of Negroponte and anywhere else on the island with a church, warehouses and significant commercial concessions. Furthermore, all cases involving Venetian subjects were to be decided by Venetian judges. The agreement was ratified two years later marking the beginning of Venice's expansion in Negroponte, which was finalized with the annexation of the entire island in 1390.

The Venetian settlement at Negroponte was modest at first but grew rapidly during the thirteenth century. Thus, by 1256 the Republic possessed a full quarter under Venetian sovereignty in the city. This «city of Venice», as Professor Jacoby aptly named it, was eventually closed up from the rest of the town, the città dei Lombardi, with a wall in the beginning of the 14th century.

A Venetian bailo was established in Negroponte by 1216. He was elected by the Maggior Consiglio in Venice and his tenure of office lasted usually for two years.⁷ In addition to his duties as civil governor, he was responsible for organizing the defence of the colony and was also the Republic's eyes and ears in the Aegean and the mainland. Two councillors, who were also appointed by Venice for a similar period of time, aided him in his tasks and together they constituted the local government, the Regimen Nigropontis.

7. On colonial governors in Negroponte and elsewhere, see Thiriet, Romanie, pp. 93-95 and 190-197.

Bartolomeo Querini was elected bailo and capitano of Negroponte sometime before May 20, 1372 and took up residence late in the summer of the same year.⁸ By the time the Senate granted him permission to return to Venice, in May 1374, he was probably already under suspicion for misconduct in the negotiations for the marriage of Maria Sanudo, the half-sister of the duke of Naxos.⁹ But, he did not leave Negroponte until the autumn because the captain of the Gulf, Pietro Mocenigo, who had been elected to replace him, had been ordered to remain at his previous post, due to the continuing Genoese danger and recent developments in the Byzantine Empire.¹⁰

The preliminary investigation into the activity of the former governor began on December 17, 1374 and was completed in less than a month, on January 4, 1375. During this time the public prosecutors interrogated nine witnesses. The deposition of a tenth witness was taken six days after the close of the investigation.¹¹ With the exception of Jacopo Vistari, who, judging from his name, was probably of Greek

8. Bartolomeo or Bortolamio q. Nicolò came from the Querini dalle Zii branch of the known Venetian family and was one of the five sopracomiti who brought Pope Urban V from Marseilles, in 1362, see A.S.V., Miscellanea Codici I- Storia Veneta 17 (gia miscell. codd. 894), M. Barbaro, Arbore dei Patrii Veneti, V.VI 28, f. 305 (Querini C). He should probably be identified with Bartolomeo Querini who was bailo of Cyprus in 1370, see A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 33, original, f. 56v (May 20, 1370). By order of the Senate, the newly elected governor with his wife and familia was to board one of the Romania galleys which were scheduled to sail from Venice on July 18, see A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, copy, ff. 14r-15v (May 20-22, 1372). The name of the new governor is given in A.S.V., Senato, Sindacati, reg. 1 (1329-1425), f. 94v; cf. the list of the Venetian governors of Negroponte in K. Hopf, Dissertazione Documentata sulla Storia di Karystos nell'isola di Negroponte, 1205-1470, Venice 1856 (transl. in Italian by G. B. Sardagna), Appendix I, p. 104.

9. According to Stefano Magno, Annali Veneti, ff. 39r-v, the metropolitan authorities had written to him on the subject sometime in 1373. This could very well have been during the first months of 1374, since the Venetian year began in March. On May 9, 1374 the Senate granted Querini's request and gave him permission to board any Venetian vessel heading for Modon and Venice, see A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, copy, ff. 183v-184r.

10. For the Senate's instructions to Pietro Mocenigo, see A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, original, f. 121v (July 11, 1374). In late August, the Senate ordered Mocenigo to take up his position in Negroponte, see A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, original, f. 133v (August 24, 1374). On the movements of the Genoese fleet, see below p. 241. On the developments in the Byzantine Empire, see D. M. Nicol, Byzantium and Venice. A study in diplomatic and cultural relations, Cambridge 1988, pp. 308-310.

11. This was Pietro Superancio, who was a supracomitus Culfi and could therefore have been away from Venice during the investigation; see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 43-46, and A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, original, f. 132v (August 24, 1374).

origin, they were all Venetians.¹² Three were commanders in the Venetian fleet, who had been stationed in the area at the time; while the others were merchants trading in the parts of Romania and noblemen residing in Negroponte, who had either been in close contact with the bailo and the other protagonists of this case or had been present in the events, and thus had a first-hand knowledge of what had transpired.¹³

On the strength of their depositions the Avogadori di Comun declared that as governor, Querini had acted «against God, law and justice», bringing dishonour on the Republic by his corrupt practices, and proceeded on the indictment. The formal charges brought against him were:¹⁴ 1) that he had coerced the duke of the Archipelago, Nicolò dalle Carceri, and his stepfather, Nicolò Sanudo, into giving their consent to the marriage of his son to the latter's daughter; that he had

12. The name Vistari is otherwise unknown. We do know, however, of a certain Filippo Vistariti, son of Giovanni, from Constantinople who was either Greek or of mixed origin, see F. Thiriet, Assemblées, v. 1, Paris-The Hague 1966, n° XXIX (September 27, 1254) and n° XXXVI (December, 1264); X. A. Μαλτέζου, «Παρατηρήσεις στον θεσμό της βενετικής υπηκοότητας. Προστατευόμενοι της Βενετίας στον λατινοκρατούμενο ελληνικό χώρο (13ος - 15ος αι.)», Σύμμεικτα 4 (1981), 8-9; cf. also D. Jacoby, «Les Vénitiens naturalisés dans l'Empire byzantin: un aspect de l'expansion de Venise en Roumanie du XIIe au milieu du XVe siècle», Travaux et Mémoires 8 (1981), 220 [repr. in idem, Studies on the Crusader States and on Venetian Expansion, Northampton 1989, n° X], and D. Jacoby, «The Byzantine Outsider in Trade (c.900-c.1350)», in Dion C. Smythe, ed., Strangers to Themselves: The Byzantine Outsider (Papers from the Thirty-second Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Sussex, Brighton, March 1998), Aldershot 2000, pp. 144-145. Vistari was on board the galley of Negroponte when its commander received orders from the bailo to sail to Andros and Naxos, he also traveled as a passenger to Corinth on board a public galley sent there on official business, and was in Venice at the time of the investigation, it is therefore very likely that he was a merchant, see Appendix, doc. A4, ll. 15-20, 36-58.

13. The galley commanders were: Giovanni Miani, Pietro Superancio and Donato Valarezzo, see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 43-46. Tomà Barbarigo was a merchant, engaged in textile and salt trade, see below and Thiriet, Délibérations, v. 2, n° 747. Domenico Polanni was a resident of Negroponte and was involved in salt and grain trade, see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 133-137. Filippo Sanudo q. Giovanni was engaged in salt and textile trade, see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 139-140; and A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, original, f. 62r (July 31, 1373); and reg. 37, original, f. 209v (August 5, 1382). He should be identified either with the Filippo who, according to K. Hopf, Chroniques, pp. 373 and 480, was governor of Pteleon between 1360 and 1362. Or, with the Filippo who, again according to Hopf, administered the village of Larachi on behalf of Maria Sanudo from 1385 to 1414, see also R.-J. Loenertz, «De quelques îles grecques et de leurs seigneurs vénitiens aux XIVe et XVe siècles», Studi Veneziani 14 (1972), 25-26. I have been unable to identify the remaining three witnesses: Stefanelo Contarini, Enrico Dandolo and Alvise de Mezzo.

subsequently seized one of the duke's fortresses, raising therein his insignia, and forced Nicolò Sanudo to pay him a large amount of money, all this to the detriment of the local government and Venice itself; 2) that he had repeatedly used for the purposes of the above-mentioned wedding the galleys of the Venetian fleet, which had been sent to Negroponte by the Captain of the Gulf for the protection of the island against the Genoese; 3) that he had sided with the Catalans of Thebes and sent the galley of Negroponte along with two smaller armed vessels against the Catalans of Athens, jeopardizing the safety of the crewmen and the very outcome of the conflict; 4) that on the pretext of purchasing wheat for the colony, he had involved a public galley in the arrest of certain subjects of Neri Acciaiuoli, whom the lord of Corinth had later had executed on the charge of treason; 5) that, during a period of grain shortage, he had defied the existing prohibitions and repeatedly permitted the export of bread-corn from Negroponte, which was used on one occasion to make biscuit for the Genoese fleet, causing famine and much suffering to the island's entire population; 6) that he had rejected the proposals of certain merchants to export salt in exchange for importing the same quantity of grain, whereas later he had licensed many others to export salt freely without any obligation whatsoever, causing great inconvenience to the Venetian community and these merchants in particular; 7) that he had appointed a certain socius suus at the head of a banderia, who in turn had assigned its command to someone else, whom he paid part of the salary keeping the rest of the money for himself;¹⁵ 8) that he had received gifts during his term of office.¹⁶

Querini was given three days within which to prepare his defense, but it was not till six months later that the case was brought to trial. Unfortunately, neither his plea nor any of the testimonies he produced to disprove the serious accusations leveled against him have survived. However, we do know from the sentence of the court that two of the charges, those relating to his involvement in the internal affairs of the Catalans and the appointment of his socius to a salaried public position, were eventually withdrawn.¹⁷

Before turning to the evidence given by the witnesses in their depositions with 15. The socius was a member of the governor's familia and his salary normally came out of the latter's expenses, see Thiriet, Romanie, pp. 195-196; cf. also X. Γάσπαρης, «Μητροπολιτική εξουσία και Αξιωματούχοι των αποικιών. Ο καπιτάνος της Κρήτης (14ος-15ος αιώνας)», Σύμμεικτα 12 (1998), 179 and 181. As a rule, colonial officials were prohibited from appointing members of their familia to public posts.

16. In 1371 the Senate included an additional clause in the Commissions of all provincial governors, which prohibited them from receiving gifts, see Queller, Patriziato, pp. 318-319.

17. See Appendix, doc. B.

respect to the first two charges, it is important to establish a more precise chronological basis for the events in question. According to the indictment, Querini used the galleys of the Venetian fleet, which had been sent to Negroponte for the protection of the island against the Genoese, for the purposes of his son's marriage to Nicolò Sanudo's daughter. In the summer of 1372 the Senate, concerned about suspicious movements of the Genoese fleet and the potential danger to Venetian interests in Romania, instructed the Venetian authorities in Euboea to equip and maintain prepared at all times the galley of Negroponte, and to report any intelligence of new developments in the area which might affect the security of ships bound east.¹⁸ As disquieting news from Negroponte reached Venice, on June 12, 1373 the Senate ordered the captain of the Gulf to dispatch two galleys from Modon and Coron for the protection of the island; the galleys were to remain in Negroponte until the threat was over and thereafter they were to rejoin the rest of the fleet.¹⁹ In March of the next year, following a complaint made by the captain of the Gulf, the Senate rebuked the bailo for disregarding the latter's orders and unnecessarily detaining one of the fleet's galleys in Negroponte.²⁰ This suggests that the Genoese threat was well over by that time; the events that concern us should, therefore, be placed between the summer of 1373 and the spring of 1374.

From his marriage to his cousin Fiorenza Sanudo, the duchess of Naxos or of the Archipelago (Aegean Sea), Nicolò Sanudo, known as «Spezzabanda», had two daughters: Maria and Elisabetta (Lisia).²¹ On her death, the duchy passed to Nicolò dalle Carceri, her son from her first marriage to Giovanni dalle Carceri, the lord of the two thirds of Euboea. In December 1371, Nicolò II dalle Carceri granted the island of Andros, the second larger island of the duchy of the Archipelago, as a fief to his half-sister Maria. As the young duke was then a minor, the donation was effected with the approval of his stepfather, Nicolò Sanudo, who was also his legal guardian, and most likely at his instigation, since the beneficiary was his own daughter.²²

Thiriet, Délibérations du Sénat de Venise concernant la Romanie, v. 1, Paris - The Hague 1958, n° 511 (July 11, 1372), 512 (August 2, 1372) and 516 (December 9, 1372); see also A.S.V., Senato, Misti, reg. 34, original, f. 27v (September 11, 1372), and f. 40v (February 22, 1373). The grant stipulated that the beneficiary and her heirs were obliged to provide personal military service to the duke of Naxos, at his request, for a total of three months each year, and twenty marines for a period of two months annually.²³ By the same act, Maria was forbidden to marry without her half-brother's permission and was bound to provide sustenance for her younger sister and see to her marriage. Maria did homage and was subsequently invested with the fief by Nicolò II, who in turn undertook to protect her rights and defend her and the fief from harm. In fact, as was provided for by the Assizes of Romania, since she was a minor at the time, her father in his capacity as guardian must have received custody of the fief of Andros with the right to enjoy its revenues until Maria reached her majority.²⁴ This explains why Nicolò Sanudo is referred to in our documents as dominus insule Andre or dominator Andre.²⁵ According to article 85 of the Assizes, a female ward could be invested upon beginning her twelfth year but did not get full possession of the fief until a year later.²⁶ In Maria's case, however, her half-brother reserved the right to refuse to give her full possession once he attained his majority.²⁷

At some point, according to Stefano Magno, Nicolò II modified the donation, this time granting the island to his half-sister a censo, that is to say in return for an annual rent.²⁸ However, he later changed his mind again and reinstated the previous

23. For the terms of the donation see Stefano Magno, Annali Veneti dal 1367 al 1388, v. 3, Civico Museo Correr, Ms. Cicogna 3531, ff. 28v-29r, published by Hopf, «Estratti», p. 182, with mistakes. For an analysis, see Jacoby, Assises, p. 280.

24. Maria was born sometime after 1363; she was therefore about seven years old when her half-brother donated the island of Andros to her. On wardship and the investiture of a female ward, see G. Recoura, Les Assises de Romania. Edition critique avec une introduction et des notes, Paris 1930; new ed. by A. Parmeggiani, Libro delle Uxanze e Statuti dello Imperio di Romania, edizione critica, Quaderni della Rivista di Bizantinistica, 1 (collana diretta da A. 27. La qual Maria li fe homazo et dito Nicolo la die defender ma a quella mai [dar] el poseso anzi venudo in etade non volse havesse quella (Magno, Annali, f. 28v-29r).

28. Magno, Annali Veneti, f. 57v, drew his information from a letter that the Senate addressed to the duke of Naxos, which he placed under the year 1373. The passage reads: Ita adi 8 avosto in pregadi fo scrito al ducha de Arcipelago haver intexo che la donation fata alla primogenita de Fiorenza Sanudo, madre de eso ducha, fiola de Nicolo Sanudo, suo paregno, de la ixola de Andre che reduta era a censo, noviter per eso destruta e et reduta a feudo che se ita e, ne par stranio, quare le scrivemo quatenus la dita primogenita debi redur in pristino stado dela sua donation, grant. This was probably after he had come of age and was free of his stepfather's influence. Nicolò Sanudo objected to this change, presumably because he considered the terms of the donation a censo to be more to his daughter's advantage than those of the original donation a feo, and the dispute was referred to Venice.²⁹ The Republic immediately took issue with the duke of the Archipelago and in August 1373, the Senate wrote to him asking him to rectify the injustice done to his half-sister. A copy of this letter was sent to the bailo who was invited to examine the case and offer his opinion, based on his expert knowledge of the customary laws of Romania.³⁰

It was probably around the same time that it became known in Negroponte that the negotiations for the marriage of Maria Sanudo to the son of Boniface Fadrique of Aragon had fallen through.³¹ As was the case with her mother some fifteen years earlier, the marriage of Maria Sanudo was a matter of concern for the Republic. For, in addition to Andros, her brother had granted to her in 1372 the island of Antiparos and the domain of Lithada in Negroponte,³² and Venice was naturally anxious to

29. The only type of donation a censo in the Assizes is the one envisaged by article 142, which deals with grants of vineyards or bourgeois land (campo burgesatico). According to this, if the Prince or any other lord has given a vineyard or bourgeois property to someone and to the heirs descending from his body for an annual rent, and this person dies without progeny, the land returns to the grantor. Unless, it is mentioned in the letter of the donation that the property is granted in borgesia; in which case the beneficiary can sell and bequeath the property freely, and if he dies intestate, then the nearest relative succeeds as if the land were movable property. The lord can also transform a fief or part of a fief into a borgesia, see Parmeggiani, Uxanze, article 142; cf. Topping, Feudal Institutions, pp. 72-73. For an analysis of this article, see Jacoby, Assises, 286-287. Although the donation of Andros was a censo, it is possible that in this case it was tantamount to a donation in borgesia, which transformed a fief into non-feudal property.

30. See above n. 28.

31. Boniface was the Catalan lord of Salona, Lidoriki, Vitrinitsa and the island of Egina, from whom Venice, in 1365, had purchased the castle of Karystos in southern Euboea. ensure that her island possessions should not fall to the wrong hands. Thus, upon hearing the news, the governor with the consent of his councillors ordered galley commander Giovanni Miani to sail to Andros and deliver two letters to Nicolò Sanudo.³³ These were presumably official letters, inviting Sanudo to come to Negroponte in order to discuss the issue up close. But it may well be supposed that it was also hinted that a suitable husband for Maria could be found on island. There is in fact good reason to believe that Querini already at this stage entertained the idea of her marriage to his son Zanino and intended to trade on Sanudo's dispute with his stepson in order to achieve his aims, because he instructed Miani, in the event that the lord of Andros refused to go to Negroponte after having read the letters, to advise him that it would be to his best interest to do so. Furthermore, he asked the galley commander to wait in order to escort Nicolò and his daughter back to Negroponte, in case she wanted to go along. Sanudo accepted the bailo's invitation and without further delay embarked on the galley together with his younger daughter, Lisia.

On his arrival in Negroponte, Sanudo met with the governor and promised to give his daughter in marriage to Zanino, if Querini succeeded in settling the dispute over Andros in his favour. Our information for this comes from Enrico Dandolo, who in turn heard about it from Jacopo Bocarammo, the duke's deputy in Negroponte.³⁴ If we are to believe Dandolo, their agreement was to be kept a secret, presumably for fear that Nicolò II dalle Carceri would otherwise refuse to accept Querini's arbitration. The plan was to lure the duke to Negroponte under the pretext of his half-sister's marriage, and thereby induce him to re-grant Andros to her and her father against an annual rent. But for this to happen they first needed to obtain the duke's approval for the projected marriage, because, as was mentioned earlier, by the terms of the donation of Andros Maria could not wed without his permission.

Nicolò II duly accepted Querini's proposal and shortly after, as planned, the governor sent the galley of Negroponte to Andros to fetch the bride and her father. After disembarking the passengers at the port of Chalkis, the galley returned to sea

33. See Appendix, doc. A5, ll. 1-26. Before sailing to Andros, Miani had orders to circumnavigate Euboea and search for two Turkish vessels that had been cited near the cape of Saint George. The cape should probably be identified with point Αιθάδα, situated on the Αιχάδα peninsula in the north-west end of Euboea, not far from the monastery of Saint George. Point Αιθάδα and point Κνημίς, situated opposite on the mainland coast, form a narrow passage (Στενά Αιχάδων) which controls the north-western entrance to the northern Evoikos Gulf, see A. E. in order to fetch the duke of the Archipelago and his entourage from Naxos.³⁵ That the duke had initially consented to this marriage is confirmed by Domenico Polanni, one of the witnesses. Polanni stated in his deposition that when he asked Franguli Crispo, who was among the island lords that had accompanied the duke at Negroponte, about the purpose of their visit there, the latter replied that they had come to attend the wedding (quod ipsi venerant ad faciendum honorem nuptiis predictis).³⁶

Nevertheless, the wedding did not take place, because Nicolò II had a serious disagreement with the governor. We do not know particulars about the dispute, but it may be assumed that the duke somehow uncovered the plot and this caused him to withdraw his support for the marriage. Querini tried to dissuade him showing him a precept he had received from Venice, stating that Maria was to marry a Venetian citizen, but to no avail. As he later explained to Enrico Dandolo, Nicolò II was willing to give his half-sister in marriage to a Venetian, for he knew well enough that he could not oppose Venice; yet he suspected that this marriage hadn't been sanctioned by her. On the other hand, according to Barbarigo, the governor had complained in the loggia that the duke and his stepfather had betrayed him and claimed that he had received letters from Venice authorizing him to admit eis dominium de sub pedibus et quod bene solvam eis.³⁷ But even if by this we are to understand that he had been empowered to find a suitable husband for Maria Sanudo, he would still have needed to obtain the Republic's approval before going ahead with the wedding.³⁸ The precept that he showed to Nicolò dalle Carceri would Ever since Hopf, scholars have generally accepted that Frangulo or Francesco Crispo acquired the island of Melos through his marriage to Fiorenza Sanudo, the daughter of Marco, lord of Melos, on November 30, 1376, see Dizionario Biografico degli Italiani, v. 30, Rome 1984, Crispo Francesco (where sources and all previous bibliography). However, the evidence given by Domenico Polanni clearly shows that he had become lord of Melos before December 17, 1374, the date of the witness' deposition. That Frangulo Crispo was present in the events is corroborated by Enrico Dandolo's testimony, see Appendix, doc. A8, l. 40.

38. When Querini's successor in Negroponte, Pietro Mocenigo (1374-1376), arranged the marriage between Giorgio III Ghisi and Maria Sanudo, he wrote to Venice informing her about the projected marriage alliance. On March 13, 1376 the Senate replied congratulating the bailo and his concillors on their conduct in the affair and instructing them on how to proceed. Nevertheless, the plan fell through and, in the end, Maria married the Veronese Gasparo Sommaripa, see Loenertz, Les Ghisi dynastes Vénitiens dans l'Archipel, 1207-1390, Florence 1975, pp. 179-180 and 253.

have certainly mentioned his son by name, had this been the case. It should be noted that the children of overseas governors were expressly forbidden from marrying someone from within the territory under the jurisdiction of their father.³⁹ Such was the Republic's determination to prevent its officials' private interests from interfering with public interests, that this restriction remained in force for a year after the end of their term of office. It is true, however, that the Maggior Consiglio occasionally bypassed the law and allowed certain marriages to take place, particularly when the projected marriage alliances were considered beneficial for the State.⁴⁰ But since there is no decision concerning Zanino Querini in the records of the Maggior Consiglio for the years 1372-1374, it may be inferred that the governor had failed to notify the metropolitan authorities about the plans for his son's marriage.

Whatever the case, having failed to dissuade Nicolò II dale Carceri, the governor resorted to strong-arm tactics in order to force him into giving his consent: he sent away the galley, which was standing by near the bridge of Chalkis to take Nicolò II and his entourage back to their islands, closed the city gates, positioning sentries before them, and placed the duke under house arrest. Under these circumstances the duke and his stepfather had no other alternative but to agree to a meeting with the bailo.⁴¹

The meeting was held early on a Sunday afternoon at the governor's residence, in the presence of two arbitrators: Saraceno de Saraceni, a prominent feudatory of Negroponte who had been granted Venetian citizenship in 1370; and Antonio d'Arduino, a former «admiratus Nigropontis», who was at the time in the service of

39. This restriction applied also to the governors themselves and was inserted in their Commissions, by order of the Maggior Consiglio, in 1355: Cum non sit conveniens nec honestum quod rectores tempore suorum regiminum, contrahant parentellam pro se vel suis, nec aliter se impediant de matrimonii contrahendis, vel beneficiis impetrandi pro se, vel suis, seu alliis ullo modo; v.p. quod addatur in commissionibus omnium nostrorum rectorum quod, sub debito sacramenti, non possint ullo modo per totum tempus suorum regiminum et per unum annum post, contrahere vel contrahi facere matrimonium, nec impetrare seu impetrari facere aliquam prebendam, seu beneficium in locis ubi fuerint rectores, pro se vel filiis, nec procurare aut tractare quod hec fiant pro se vel aliis ullo modo, per totum tempus predictum, A. 40. This was the case with Paolo Querini who, on April 19, 1411, obtained permission from the Maggior Consiglio to marry while still on assignment in Corfu. See V. Crescenzi, «Esse de Maiori Consiglio. Legittimità Civile e Legittimazione Politica nella Repubblica di Venezia (secc. XIII-XVI), Rome 1996, p. 10, n. 9.

41. Querini originally had promised the duke that he would take him back to his island in three days, see Appendix, docs. A2, ll. 20-27; A8, ll. 18-29.

Nicolò Sanudo.⁴² Within the same day an agreement was reached by which Bartolomeo Querini backed down from his original demand and consented to his son's marriage with Lisia, Sanudo's younger daughter. For his part, Sanudo agreed to deposit the sum of 4,000 ducats for his daughter's dowry. Furthermore, it was agreed that Nicolò II dalle Carceri would cede the island of Andros to Lisia after her sister's death, in case Maria should not leave any legitimate heir.⁴³ To ensure the fulfillment of the above promise, Querini asked to be given as a pledge the duke's castle in Mantoudi, in the northeastern part of Euboea. In the event that the union was dissolved on grounds of minority, Sanudo would incur a penalty stipulated at 2,000 ducats. The money was to be deposited with Saraceno de Saraceni for safekeeping; but, according to the witnesses, he later handed it to the bailo – with Nicolò Sanudo's permission – who took it with him when he returned to Venice. In addition to this, Sanudo gave Querini two horses and several barrels of wine as gifts for the wedding.

The nuptials were celebrated in great haste on the following day; the ceremony took place in the church of San Domenico before numerous guests.⁴⁴ Immediately thereafter, the bailo sent one of his chancellors together with a judicial official, named Lança, to Mantoudi to arrange the conveyance of the land. All formalities having been completed Mantoudi was handed over to them and Bartolomeo Querini's insignia were raised on the ramparts of the castle. Nicolò II dalle Carceri was none too pleased with the cession of Mantoudi, but both he and his stepfather stood to gain from this marriage alliance, because Querini had promised to grant them licenses to export wheat from Negroponte, if all went well.⁴⁵

Indeed, shortly after the wedding two griparie – one of which belonged to Antonio d'Arduino – came from the Archipelago and loaded wheat on behalf of Nicolò II dalle Carceri and Nicolò Sanudo. Part, if not all, of the wheat came from the state storehouses in the city of Negroponte. This was apparently intended for the needs of the city and not for export; as a result, there was grain shortage in Negroponte.⁴⁶

In an attempt to alleviate the shortage, the bailo sent two agents to survey the countryside and record all the existing wheat. Once the inventory was completed, Querini proclaimed that a certain quantity of this wheat was to be conveyed to the city.⁴⁷ A few days later, seeing that his mandate remained a dead letter, he assembled the nobles and some of the citizens of Negroponte with a view to resolving transportation problems. In the ensuing heated discussion, Tomà Bolani suggested that the bailo should first retain the griparia which was at that very moment loading wheat at Protimo (in the gulf of Aliveri, on the southwestern coast of Euboea),⁴⁸ with his permission, no less, and then look for it elsewhere. At first, Querini denied knowing anything about it. But when confronted with evidence proving that he had licensed Nicolò Sanudo to export this particular shipment of wheat at Antonio d'Arduino's request, he replied that the ship was scheduled to stop off at Negroponte before leaving for its final destination. What happened next is not very clear. According to the deposition of Giovanni Miani, everyone expected the ship to arrive loaded with wheat, yet when it finally did appear later that day, it sailed past the bridge of Negroponte, headed toward Thessalonica, without stopping. Tomà Barbarigo, on the other hand, testified that the ship stopped at Negroponte, albeit only to unload a small quantity of wheat. Their accounts, however, tally with each other in the following point, that Antonio d'Arduino returned to the city of Negroponte sometime later with a griparia partly freighted with oil and charged it with bread-corn, which he thence transported to Thessalonica. Although no one dared accuse the former admiratus Nigropontis, it was clear enough to all that he was hand in glove with the bailo because he wouldn't have been able to export the grain without his permission.⁴⁹ It should be noted, that the grain exported by d'Arduino from the city of Negroponte amounted to some 600 modia, perhaps more.⁵⁰

46. According to the witnesses, there was no concern over a possible dearth of wheat at the time, see Appendix, doc. A3, ll. 31-51.

50. At least according to Barbarigo, see above n. 49. Some other witnesses give different figures as well as a variety of locations for the provenance of the grain: Dandolo stated that once, when he was at Oreos, in the north of Euboea, he saw a galiota which belonged to Antonio d'Arduino freighted with 1,000 mensure of wheat and that this was during the shortage in

During the following months the situation deteriorated and by July-August 1374 conditions in the city had become intolerable; so much so that people complained in public that neither wheat was to be found nor bread to be bought. As his term of office was drawing to an end, Querini prohibited the export of grain from the entire island and the Gulf of vale Licone,⁵¹ and had a vessel patrol the area to prevent any illegal activity. He also informed the representatives of the feudal lords of the restrictions on the commerce of wheat and other victuals, and told the new bailo, Pietro Moçenigo, that he was looking to secure additional supplies and had even notified the metropolitan authorities. At the same time, however, he continued to issue export licenses in defiance of his own orders.⁵² Not surprisingly, the measures failed to relieve the situation and thus the famine persisted even after Querini's departure from office.

Among those who received permission from the bailo to export grain were Nicolò II dalle Carceri and Nicolò Sanudo; the former exported 800 modia of wheat from Oreos and Mantoudi to Naxos, while the latter loaded two galiote with grain, which was thence transported to Chios, where it became biscuit for the Genoese navy.⁵³ Similarly, Mapheo Morosini, one of the bailo's councillors, was allowed to export several times bread-corn and flour to Thessalonica, despite the fact that the councillors of Negroponte were explicitly prohibited by their Commission from engaging in commercial activities.⁵⁴ Given their connection with the governor it is quite certain that the export licenses were granted to them as personal favors. And, even though there is no evidence to that effect, it is realistic to assume that the bailo also took kickbacks in return for these licenses. This was probably the case with the brother of the late Alexios, the lord of Christoupolis Negroponte, but whence it came, he could not say with certainty (Appendix, doc. A8, ll. 81-91). According to Domenico Polanni, d'Arduino exported on one single occasion 800 modia, which was loaded intra culfos; this could mean the territory located on either side of the northern and southern Evoikos Gulf (Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 47-57). Modios and mensura are measures of capacity used for grains; according to E. Zachariadou, «Prix et marchés des céréales en Romania (1343-1405)», Nuova Rivista Storica 61 (1971), 301-302, 1 byzantine modios or modios of Romania (mogio del gorno di Romania) = 322 litres. The mensura or mouzourion (cretan mesure) is equivalent to 17,089 litres.

54. On this restriction see Thiriet, Assemblées, v.1, p. 62, n° CLII (March 24, 1291). That this restriction was still in force at the time is confirmed by the fact that Morosini claimed that he exported the goods on behalf of his brother, see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 64-69.

(pres. Kavala), who, we are told, exported legumes, wheat and other grains from Pteleon and Negroponte in spite of the prohibition.⁵⁵

There is further evidence showing that the governor made a practice of licensing only certain individuals to trade in particular commodities. Domenico Polanni stated in his deposition that Querini refused to give him permission to export 1,000 modia of salt in exchange for importing the same quantity of grain, whereas he allowed many others to do the very same thing, and licensed Filippo and Giulielmo Sanudo to export 2,000 and 300-400 modia of salt, respectively, without any obligation.⁵⁶ The testimony of Tomà Barbarigo is highly illustrative of the difficulties some merchants encountered in Negroponte during Querini's term of office. He stated that a group of merchants, including himself, requested to be given the galley of Negroponte in order to ship cloths to Thessalonica, but the bailo refused because he had promised to transport the duke of the Archipelago and Nicolò Sanudo with his family back to their islands. Thus, they were forced to wait for the galley to return. Barbarigo went on to say that he had purchased some 6,000 modia salt for himself and another 7,000 modia for a certain Albano Baduario, and was about to export them, when Querini canceled the transaction and ordered the salt vendors to return the money to the merchant within the next three days. Somewhat later, the governor proclaimed quod dicti venditores nichil deberent facere de dicto sale absque sua licentia. What happened next is not known because the witness left the island. This incident,

In 1357, emperor John V Palaiologos granted them the fortified cities of Crysopolis (at the mouth of the Strymon river), Anaktoropolis and the island of Thassos and somewhat later they extended their authority over Christoupolis. After his brother's death, John requested Venetian citizenship as a means to secure his family's future against the mounting Turkish threat, which was granted to him on January 10, 1374. however, reveals that salt dealers usually sold their goods freely in Negroponte.⁵⁷

Let us now turn to the events surrounding the arrest and execution of Neri Acciaiuoli's subjects. First of all it is important to understand how Querini came to be implicated in this affair. All the evidence points to one person, Saraceno de Saraceni. It must be remembered that he was Neri Acciaiuoli's father-in-law. As we saw earlier, Saraceno together with Antonio d'Arduino had mediated the settlement between Querini and Nicolò dalle Carceri. Moreover, it seems that he was well acquainted with the bailo, because, according to Domenico Polanni, the latter had spent several days as a guest in his tower outside the city walls.⁵⁸ It may therefore be assumed that the governor agreed to purchase wheat from Neri Acciaiuoli as a personal favour to Saraceno. This explains why he insisted on purchasing wheat from Corinth, regardless of its high price, when he could have bought it from the surrounding regions pro uno yperpero modium et pro minori.⁵⁹ But he was careful enough not to create a scandal. Thus, once again he convened a council and informed those present that he had been approached by an agent of Neri Acciaiuoli with a proposal for the sale of 400 modia of wheat, which would cover some of the needs of Negroponte.

Despite certain objections about the price of the wheat, Querini ordered galley commander Donato Valaresso to set sail for Corinth and take with him Saraceno de

57. See Appendix, doc. A6, ll. 16-23 and ll. 58-67. Most of the salt sold in Negroponte came from salt marshes in the Gulf of Pagasiticos. On the salt trade in Negroponte, see Thiriet, Romanie, pp. 338; cf. also J.-C. Hocquet, Le Sel et la Fortune de Venise, Production et Monopole, v. 1, Université de Lille III, 1979, pp. 92-93.

58. According to Polanni, Querini stayed outside the city twice for health reasons; once as a guest in Saraceno's tower and on another occasion in the village of Άγιος Νικόλαος in Lilanto, south of Negroponte, see Appendix, doc. A2, ll. 161-167. Stefanelo Contarini, on the other hand, stated in his deposition that the bailo spent five days in Lilanto and a few days in Argalea, to the north of Negroponte. It may therefore be inferred that Saraceno's tower was situated somewhere in Argalea, see Appendix, doc. A7, ll. 56-63. On these locations see Koder, Negroponte, pp. 50, 111ff. (Argalia) and pp. 33, 67 (Lilanto, Basiliko); cf. Δ. Τριανταφυλλόπουλος, «Τοπογραφικά προβλήματα της Μεσαιωνικής Εύβοιας», Αρχείον Ευβοϊκών Μελετών 19 (1974), 221 and 229-231; see also Loenertz, Ghisi, p. 159. By order of the Great Council of August 1, 1310, the bailo and one of his councillors or both councillors, if the bailo was absent, were to remain always within the walls of the city for security reasons, see Thiriet, Assemblées, v. 1, n° 222. This explains the public prosecutors' interest in Querini's sojourn outside the city. However, he was not formally charged with dereliction of duty, despite allegations that during his absence one of his councillors had fallen ill and as a result the second councillor was left on his own to administer justice in Negroponte.

Saraceni and a few companions of his.⁶⁰ In addition to this, he instructed him to chase out two Turkish boats, that had been cited in the gulf of Megre, and protest against this to Neri and illis de Megra; he was also to warn them that, if they continued to harbour Turkish vessels, they would be held responsible for any damages caused to Negroponte and its ships. Megre may be safely identified with Megara, 12 km west of Athens on the road to Corinth. The castle of Megara, a Catalan possession, was occupied by the Florentine lord of Corinth sometime after the death of the Catalan vicar-general Mathew of Peralta, in the summer of 1374.⁶¹ Since Valaresso stated that he conveyed Querini's grievances to Neri, it may be assumed that illi de Megra were operating under his instructions. The events in question should, therefore be placed shortly after the fall of Megara.

After putting the passengers ashore at Corinth, Valaresso, on Neri's instructions, continued his journey southeast to the village of Epediada, where he loaded 400 modia of wheat.⁶² He, then, returned to Corinth, picked up Saraceno, loaded another 200 modia of wheat and subsequently set sail for Negroponte. While he was still in Epediada, Valaresso heard that Acciaiuoli had arrested a certain Guilemaccio dela Roça and a few others. His testimony is confirmed by Jacopo Vistari, a passenger on Valaresso's galley, who had disembarked at Corinth and had witnessed the arrest.⁶³ Guilemaccio and his alleged accomplices, we are told, were charged with conspiracy to murder Neri Acciaiuoli and later decapitated. It should be noted, that when Neri invaded the Catalan territories and occupied Megara, the pretext he used was that the Catalans had refused to surrender certain fugitive subjects of his.⁶⁴ In view of these facts, it is very likely that dela Roça and the others were the fugitives Neri was seeking, and that they had fled in the meantime to Negroponte, whence Saraceno de Saraceni lured them back to Corinth. This explains why he was the

62. Epediada should be identified with the medieval fortress and village of Piada (pres. Nea Epidauros), mentioned in Greek and Venetian sources from the 15th century onwards also as Πεδιάδα, which is situated southeast of Corinth and northwest of Ancient Epidauros, see J. Longnon - P. only one to board the ship on its return trip to Negroponte.⁶⁵ That Saraceno played an active part in their arrest is further confirmed by the fact that he brought back with him to Negroponte certain jewels that belonged to Guilelmaccio dela Roça, which were given to him by Neri to keep tamquam bona sui proditoris.⁶⁶ It is very likely that Querini ignored all along the true purpose of Saraceno's trip to Corinth, because galley commander Giovanni Miani stated in his deposition that he later overheard the governor in the loggia complaining that none of this would have happened had he not agreed to send the galley there in the first place.⁶⁷ Indeed, had he been privy to the plot against Guilelmaccio dela Roça, he would have hardly made a public admission of his involvement in it.

The identity of Guilelmaccio dela Roça is problematic. According to Polanni, who is our only source on the subject, Guilelmaccio was Neri's brother-in-law (gener); but he is either mistaken or using the term loosely to say that he was related to Neri through marriage, because elsewhere in his deposition he stated that one of the men who traveled to Corinth with Saraceno was the latter's brother-in-law (cugnatus).⁶⁸

A few days after Guilelmaccio's execution, his widow and two children arrived in Negroponte, and two weeks later his daughter married Mapheo Morosini, Querini's councillor. Subsequently, Morosini asked for the governor's help in reclaiming his wife's family jewels. Thus, late one evening, Querini met with Saraceno at the loggia and demanded the return of the jewels. But the latter refused to hand them back and they had an angry argument during which the governor burst out in the hearing of all present: «You made me send the galley to Corinth and made me the butcher of the Commune, and now you refuse to do what I ask of you?» This outburst apparently convinced Saraceno to relinquish the jewels which were eventually returned to Guilelmaccio's daughter.⁶⁹

The evidence given so far by the witnesses in their depositions reveals that Bartolomeo Querini during his term of office, and especially the last months, constantly pursued his own interests, in neglect of those of the colony and the state, causing much suffering and political embarrassment. By contrast, his involvement in the internal affairs of the Catalans seems to have been within the bounds of his duties as colonial governor and this is presumably why this particular charge was withdrawn in the end. Querini, as we already know from the indictment, sided with the Catalans of Thebes against the Catalans of Athens and participated in an attack against the city of Athens, under the joint leadership of Louis and Boniface Fadrique of Aragon, with vessels that he equipped with public funds and manned with inhabitants of Euboea. In addition, we are told that at some point, probably before the attack, the bailo imprisoned an envoy sent by the castellan and veguer-captain of the city of Athens, Galceran of Peralta. Although fragmentary, this information enables us to place this, otherwise unknown, incident in its proper historical context. The conflict referred to in our documents can be easily identified with the civil war which broke out between the Catalan duchies of Attica and Boeotia in the summer of 1374, following the refusal of Galceran of Peralta to obey the order of King Frederick III of Sicily to give up the castellany and vegueria of Athens. On the eve of the war, the Company, «acting for the last time as a body corporate», conferred the supreme command of the Catalan duchies to the powerful count of Salona, Louis Fadrique of Aragon and his uncle Boniface. Shortly after, however, and while the civil war was still raging on, the two men fell into a separate quarrel. Since both their names are mentioned by our sources, it is safe to assume that the attack against Athens occurred during the first months of the war.⁷⁰ The reasons for Querini's involvement in this internal conflict are alluded to in the deposition of Enrico Dandolo. According to him, the governor waged war against the Catalans because of some outstanding debts they had toward the Jews of Negroponte. That Querini should go to such lengths to protect the interests of certain Jews is not surprising, for as Venetian nationals they were entitled to the same «privileges enjoyed overseas by other Venetians», such as diplomatic and legal protection.⁷¹ Besides, he had an additional interest in seeing that these debts were paid, for this could have had an effect on the ability of the entire Jewish community to fulfill its fiscal obligations toward the Commune.

Jacoby, «Venice and the Venetian Jews in the Eastern Mediterranean», in G. Cozzi, ed., Gli Ebrei e Venezia (secoli XIV-XVIII), Milan 1987, pp. 29-58 [repr. in D. Jacoby, Studies on the Crusader States, n° X].

After careful deliberation, on July 12, 1375 the Avogadori di Comun asked for Bartolomeo's conviction and proposed that he be ineligible for the office of governor of Negroponte, that all the obligations arising from the marital contract be declared void and that he be compelled to pay a fine of two hundred ducats. However, the Maggior Consiglio voted for the more lenient sentence put forward by the Signoria (a body consisting of the Doge, his six Councillors and the heads of the Quarantia), which was perpetual exclusion from all offices in Negroponte and a fine of one hundred ducats.⁷²

The sentence imposed on Bartolomeo Querini suggests that the mechanism devised by Venice to control its officials, despite its efficiency, was not entirely fool-proof. Because in theory, at least, it enabled a thoroughly corrupt official such as the former bailo of Negroponte to be appointed anew to other administrative posts, where he could easily commit similar mistakes. Whether Querini was ever chosen again for high office remains to be discovered. But it is worth noting, that in December 1375, six months after Querini's conviction, a committee of five Savii was appointed by the Maggior Consiglio to examine and revise the governors' Commissions and the Capitularies of officials because there was much confusion *occasione partium que quotidie capiuntur in consilis de revocando et corrigendo preterita, que confusiones multiplicaverunt quod inducunt maximam obscuritatem, ita quod rectores, judices et officiales nostri nesciunt ad quod se tenere debeant.*⁷³

In conclusion, we do not know whether the marriage between Zanino Querini and Lisia Sanudo was dissolved after his father's conviction. In any case, according to the genealogist Marco Barbaro, Zanino died on April 4, 1385.⁷⁴ As for Lisia, Hopf states – without, however, citing his sources – that sometime between 1384 and 1400 she was betrothed to Giacomo Crispo, the son of Francesco Crispo who became duke of Naxos in 1383, after the assassination of Nicolò dalle Carceri.⁷⁵ This, if indeed Hopf's statement is founded in fact, is the last we hear of her. It was her niece Fiorenza Sommaripa, the daughter of Maria Sanudo, who eventually married Giacomo Crispo, after his accession to the throne of the duchy of Naxos, following his father's death.

File consisting of 17 folios (of which 2 are bifolios), unbound and unnumbered, all well preserved, with the following indication on the cover: «Querini Bartolommeo, bailo e capitano a Negroponte, violenza contro Nicola dalle Carceri di una figlia di Nicolo Sanudo, che voleva fosse sposata a un proprio figlio, 1374». Folios 16r to 17r are blank; f. 17v bears on the bottom margin the note: Contra ser Bartolomeum Quirino, olim baiulum et capitaneum Nigropontis. There are two sets of numbers on the left-hand margin of the documents numbering the charges before and after the changes in the indictment, from 1 to 8 and from 1 to 6, respectively; 0 is used to indicate the charges that were withdrawn. The numbers also serve to refer the reader to the relevant passages in the witnesses' depositions.

With the exception of the indictment, which is published first, as found in the file, all the other documents are published according to chronological order.

per dictum ser Bartholameum, ipso existente baiulo, de quodam suo filio cum filia ser Nicole Sanuto, domino Andre, que dicuntur fuisse facte per vim pro parte dicti ser Nicole, suo sacramento respondet et dicit quod ipse 10 sentivit per uxorem, que sentiverat a domina Frangula Dandulo, uxor quondam nobilis viri ser Marci Dandulo, qualiter tractabuntur nuptie de filio dicti ser Bartholamei, baiuli, cum filia dicti ser Nicole et quod galea Nigropontis erat itura in Andre et ad insulas ad levandum dictum ser Nicolam et ducam, fratrem suum, et alios dominos insule. Verum quod ipse 15 testis vidit galeam Nigropontes predictam recedere de Nigroponte et vidit eam reverti et in reversione apportavit ducam Arcipelagi et alios dominos insule. Et cum ipsis venit quidam Frangulus Cespus, dominus Meli, quem ipse testis interrogavit quid ipsi venerint ad faciendum in Nigroponte, et ipse Frangulus respondidit sibi quod galea Nigropontis iverat ad levandum eos 20 et quod ipsi venerant ad faciendum honorem nuptiis predictis. Et est verum quod, dum essent dicti domini Nigroponte, ipse testis sentivit a ||Frangulo predicto|| qualiter ipsi non erant in concordia cum baiulo predicto de dictis nuptiis, et conquerebantur dicendo quod dominus ||baiulus|| protulerat eis infra tercium diem facere proicere illos ad domum suam, et quod videndo 25 quod non poterant esse in concordio, dictus baiulus fecerat quod galea transiverat pontem. Et ita ipse testis vidit quod transiverat et vidit quod porte Nigropontis custodiebantur, que non consuevarent custodiri, pro tali quod finaliter ipsi accordaverint se de nuptiis. Et facto concordio inter illos, statim ghalea rediit de supra pontem et proiecit illos dominos in Andre. De

Nigropontis stando per aliquid tempus extra, respondit scit quod ivit ad turrem Saraceni propter infirmitatem, ubi stetit per aliquos dies, quod non venit in Nigroponte, et, per similem modum, ivit ad Lilantum ad Sanctum Ni-colaum propter infirmitatem, stando pluribus diebus extra terram. | Et est verum quod vidit plures unum ex consiliariis solum tenere jus, quia alias consiliarius erat infirmus et baiulus erat extra terram.*

170 *Interrogatus si scit quod fecerit verbare aliquem piscatorem, quia, piscando pro eo cum una tracta, non ceperat pisces, respondit quod nescit

THE DEPOSITION OF FILIPPO SANUDO, SON OF THE LATE GIOVANNI SANUDO

December 18, 1374

f. 4r

1374 die XVIII decembris

Nobilis vir ser Philipus Sanudho, quondam domini Johannis Sanudho, coram dominis advocatoribus communis personaliter constitutus testis iuratus, interrogatus et examinatus dicere veritatem super eo quod scit, super 5 eo quod dicitur ser Bartholomeum Quirino, olim baiulum Nigropontis, contracssisse matrimonium cum nobile viro ser Nicola Sanudho, domino insule Andre, ||contra voluntatem|| domini Nicolai ||da le Carcere et nolente
 dicto ser Nicola Sanudol|| et [cum] suo sacramento [[sacramento]] firmavit super dicto facto se nil aliud scire, nisi quod est verum quod ipse bene 10 scit, quod per dictum ser Bartholomeum, baiulum, fuit missa una galea communis Venetiarum in Andre, que tunc erat ibi in Negroponte, ad acipiendum dictum dominum ducham et ser Nicolam Sanudho, predictum, que galea conduxit predictos, dominum ducham et ser Nicolam, Nigro-pontem. Et ibi, ||transactis aliquibus diebus||, contracatum fuit predictum 15 matrimonium inter filium dicti ser Bartholamei Quirino et filiam dicti ser Nicole. Et audivit dictus testis postea publice murmurari per civitatem Nigropontis, quod dictus dominus Nicola fecerat dictas nuptias non voluntarie, sed tamquam persona coacta. Interrogatus a quibus hoc audivit dici respondit quod non recordatur, nec sciret dicere nisi quod sic murmurabatur 20 per civitatem Nigropontis.

Interrogatus super facto quod dicitur dictum dominum Nicolam

Sanudho depositasse II M ducatorum in manibus ser Sarasini de Sarasinis et quod dictus ser Bartholomeus Quirino dictos ducatos II M astulit de manibus dicti ser Sarasini, respondit quod ipse audivit publice dici quod in contractu dicti matrimonii fuerat imposta pena II M ducatorum, ne partem peniteret, et quod dictus dominus Nicola Sanudho depositaverat dictos II M ducatos in manibus ser Saraceni de Saracenis, et quod dictus ser Bartholomeus postea habuerat dictos II M ducatos. Interrogatus quomodo dictus ser Bartholomeus habuit dictos ducatos II M et si habuit eos de voluntate dicti domini Nicole, respondit quod nescit, nisi quod dictus testis audivit sic dici per civitatem Nigropontis.

Interrogatus super facto bladorum que dicitur dictum ser Bartholameum Quirino permississe extrahy de insula Nigropontis illis qui fuerant sibi in auxilium ad faciendum dictum matrimonium, respondit quod super hoc nil aliud scit, nisi quod, contracto dicto matrimonio, dictus testis scit quod venerunt due graparie de Arçipelago ad insulam Nigropontis et ibi caraverunt se furmento, sed quo dicte graparie conducerent dictum furmentum, dictus testis nesciret dicere. Interrogatus nomine cuius fuit caricatum dictum furmentum, respondit quod fuit carichatum nomine domini duche Arcipelagi et dictum dominum Nicole, domini Andre.

Interrogatus si propter extrahere dictum furmentum de insula Nigropontis postea consequita est ||magnall| caritudo vel sinistrum civitati et insule Nigropontis, respondit quod sic. Interrogatus si ||aliud|| frumentum fuit extractum de consentia et voluntate dicti ser Bartholamei baiuli, respondit quod sic ||cum una galiota domini duce Arcipelagill|. Interrogatus si quoniam extractum fuit dictum frumentum erat penuria in insula Nigropontis, respondit quod prima vice, qua dictus dominus baiulus concesit gratiam dicto domino duche Arçipelagi de extrahendo furmentum, non erat caritudo in insula Nigropontis, sed una alia vice, qua concesit gratiam dicto domino duce de extrahendo furmentum et permisit exthray, tunc erant maxima caritudo et fames in insula Nigropontis.

Interrogatus si scit quod ser Johannes Myani fuerit missus per dictum dominum baiulum pro dicto matrimonio in Andre ad acipiendum cum galea sua ad acipiendum dictum dominum Nicolam Sanudho et filiam suam, respondit quod scit quod per dominum baiulum fuit missus in Andree dictus ser Johannes Myani. THE DEPOSITION OF JACOBO VISTARI OF NEGROPONTE

December 18, 1374

f. 11r

1374 die XVIII decembris

5 Jacobus Vistari de Nigroponte coram dominis advocatoribus communis personaliter constitutus testis juratus, interrogatus et examinatus dicere veritatem, ut supra, super querela contra dictum ser Bartholameum Quirino, olim baiulum Nigropontis etc. Et primo, interrogatus super facto nuptiarum contractarum inter filium ser Bartholamei et filiam ser Nicole Sanuto etc., suo sacramento respondet et dicit quod ipse a se nichil sciret de certo dicere. Sed est bene verum quod ipse testis publice audiebat dicere per terram Nigropontis quod dicti domini de ca Sanudo fecerant dictas nuptias magis ex timore quam ex amore, sed de aliqua conventione vel pacto dictarum nuptiarum ipse nichil scit.

10 Interrogatus si scit quod occaxione dictarum nuptiarum ser Bartholameus umquam miserit galea Nigropontis seu de aliis galeis, quas miserat acceptum pro custodia terre, ad insulas pro levando dominos seu pro levando novicium, suo sacramento respondet quod ipse scit quod una vice, existente eo teste cum galea Nigropontis, dominus baiulus misit ad dicendum almiraleo galee quod ipsi irent cum galea ad Andre ad levandum ser Nicolam et postea in Nicosia ad levandum ducam Arcipelagi et portare eos Nigropontem, sed causam ipse testis nescit, nisi quod fuit tunc quando dicte nuptie complete fuerunt. Et est verum quod ipse scit quod postea ipse baiulus misit de galeis communis, que venerant pro custodia terre, ad insu-

THE DEPOSITION OF GALLEY COMMANDER GIOVANNI MIANI

December 19, 1374

f. 12r

1374 die XVIII decembris

Nobilis vir ser Iohannes Miani coram dominis advocatoribus communis personaliter constitutus testis iuratus, interrogatus et examinatus, ut supra, dicere veritatem, primo si dictus ser Bartholameus Quirino missit dictum 5 testem cum sua galea in Andre ad accipendum dictum dominum Nicolam et filiam suam et si ipsas portavit Nigroponte, respondit quod est verum quod dum dictus testis foret Nigropontem cum sua galea venerint nova quod due barche Turchorum erant ad puntam sancti Georgii, et tunc dictus dominus baiulus misit pro dicto teste et dixit sibi quod poneret se ad punctum cum

Et tunc iterato, dictus dominus baiulus missit pro dicto teste et ipse tunc, una cum consiliariis suis, precepit dicto testi quod [[ire]] deberet ire ad querendum dictas barchas per loca ynsule et circuire insulam, et quod, postea, deberet ire versus partes Andre et presentare domino Nicole Sanudho unam literam vel duas, quas dedit sibi[[i]] dictus dominus baiulus, inponendo dicto testi quod si dictus dominus Nicola nolet venire, ocazione dicte literae, quod dictus testis deberet horectenus, ex parte eorum, precipere dicto domino Nicole quod deberet 15 venire Nigropontem, quia erat expediens quod persona sua foret illic. Et quod dictus testis dictum ser Nicolam deberet fere super sua galea ||et filiam dicti domini Nicole, si ipsam secum ducere velet||. Et sicut dictus testis ivit et fecit sicut sibi impositum fuerat superius. Et presentavit dictas literas dicto domino Nicole, qui dominus Nicolas, receptis dictis literis et auditio dicto 20 teste, dixit quod volebat venire et asendit galeam dicti testis cum filia sua parva, unde dictus testis duxit ipsum cum dicta filia sua Nigropontem.*

Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus existente penuria et magna necesitate bladi in civitate Nigropontis permisit extrahii furmentum de insula et de civitate Nigropontis, respondit super hoc tamen scire, videlicet 25 quod est verum quod, dum in civitate Nigropontis foret caritudo bladi, dictus dominus baiulus fecit congregari ad consilium omnes ||nobiles et de burgensibus|| Nigropontis inponendo eis quod suum furmentum facerent conduci intra civitatem. Et per aliquos fuit ibi dictum quod foret bonum facere hoc. Et inter alios ser Thomas Bolani habuit dicere quod foret bonum 30 retinere unam gripariam Antonii de Arduino, qui morat in Arzipelagum, et tota die expetabatur quod veniret caricata furmento, que griparia, postea, venit Nigropontem caricata furmento et non fuit ibi retenta, sed transivit pontem et ivit Salonichum. Et scit dictus testis quod postea, transeuntibus aliquibus mensibus, dictus Antonius fecit caricari in Nigroponte unam aliam 35 suam gripariam oleo et, quia dicta griparia non erat bene caricata dicto oleo, dictus Antonius accepit aliquam quantitatatem bladi de civitate Nigropontis et caricavit illud super dictam gripariam et illud etiam portavit Salonichum. Interrogatus si dictum furmentum fuit extractum per dictum ser Antonium de civitate Nigropontis de consencia dicti domini baiuli, respondit 40

THE DEPOSITION OF TOMA BARBARIGO

December 19, 1374

f. 9r

1374 die XVIII decembris

Nobilis vir ser Thomas Barbarigo coram dominis advocatoribus communis personaliter constitutus testis iuratus et examinatus ut supra dicere veritatem super his de quibus interrogabitur. Et primo, si scit quod 5 dictus dominus baiulus cogerat dominum Nicolam Sanudho, dominatorem Andre, ad dandum unam filiam suam in uxorem uni filio dicti domini baiuli, respondit quod, quia ipse testis non erat Nigroponte tempore quo contractum fuit dictum matrimonium, super hoc facto nichil scit, nisi per auditum, quia cum applicuit postea Nigropontem, iam facto dicto matrimonio, audivit 10 publice dici quod dictus dominus Nicola fecerat dictum matrimonium non voluntarie sed coate. Et audivit etiam dici dictus testis quod, nolente dicto domino Nicola facere dictum matrimonium, dictus baiulus dixerat sub lobia, roncinando de domino Nicola predicto et de domino ducha Arzipelagi: «Permitant tamen isti proditores quod ego recipiam literas de Venecia, quod 15 ego acipiam eis dominium de sub pedibus et quod bene solvam eis.»

Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus missit galeam Nigropontis ad portandum ducham et dominum Nicolam Sanudo cum tota sua familiam in Andre, respondit quod sic, et dicit ipse testis quod illo tunc ipse et aliqui alii mercatores de Venetiis volebant dictam galeam pro mitendo panos Salonicum et dominus baiulus noluit tunc eam sibi dare, aserens quod ipsam promiserat dictis domino duce et domino Nicole Sanudo et quod: «Ad reditum dicte galee ipse daret nobis dictam galeam.» Et ita dedit sibi dictam galeam cum redivit.

- Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus, existente maxima penuria bladi 25 in civitate Nigropontis, permisit extrahy bladum de insula et de civitate Nigropontis per ser Antonium Darduino, respondit quod est verum quod, dum esset maximum incomodum in civitate Nigropontis, dictus dominus baiulus misit aliquos quesitum per insulam et ad sciendum quanta quantitas furmenti posset reperiri pro faciendo eam conduci intra civitatem. Et dum 30 redivissent illi, qui sic fuerant missi ad querendum de dicto furmento, dictus dominus baiulus fecit notari quantitatem furmenti quam illi invenerant et tunc fecit fieri unum preceptum quod de dicto furmento deberet conduci certa quantitas intra civitatem et stantibus postea aliquibus diebus et non reperiretur aliquid furmenti nec panis, dictus baiulus fecit congregari ad 35 consilium nobiles et aliquos de burgensibus Nigropontis, ut sibi consu-leretur super facto recuperandi furmentum, et ibi fuerunt dicta multa et multa. Et inter alios ser Tomas Bolani habuit dicere dicto domino baiulo: «Domine ut scitis una vestra graparia est ad Protimo et caricat se furmento.
 Vos debetis facere retineri dictum furmentum et ||postea|| provideretur
 40 aliunde.» Et tunc dictus baiulus volebat ostendere quod de hoc nihil sciret.
 Et tunc per aliquos de dicto consilio fuit sibi probatum quomodo ipse conceserat gratiam domino Nicole Sanudo de extrahendo de insula Nigropontis dictum navigium furmenti et hoc ad petitum ser Antonii de Arduino.
 Ita quod dictus baiulus nescivit hec negare et dixit: «O ||dimitamus ire||,
 45 quia dictum navigium bene veniet huc ||antequam vadat alio bene tenebris bonus modus||.» Unde postea venit dicta graparia Nigropontem cum furmento, sed tamen non habebat totum suum caricum. Et ostendidit dicta graparia vele discaricare dictum furmentum et discaricavit unam parvam quantitatatem furmenti, quam postea iterato ipsam caricavit. Et cum hoc per 50 dictum ser Antonium fuit extracta de civitate Nigropontis una quantitas furmenti et farine, quam caricavit super dicta graparia et illam portavit Salonichum. Interrogatus quanta quantitas furmenti et farine fuit hec que fuit extracta de civitate Nigropontis per dictum ser Antonium, respondit quod nescit sed credit quod fuerit quantitas plurimum quam VI^c modia.
 55 Interrogatus si dictus ser Antonius dictam quantitatatem furmenti et farine extrasit de civitate Nigropontis de consentia dicti domini baiuli, respondit quod sic, quia aliter non potuisset eum extrahere.

Interrogatus super facto salis positi in commune et de lucro consecuto exinde, respondit super dicto facto se nil alliud scire, nisi quod, dum dictus testis emisset pro se et pro ser Albano Baduario plurimum quam VI^m modia salis et quasi VII^m et iam solvisset, dictus dominus baiulus missit pro quaternis de mercatis et omnes emtiones quas fecerat dictus testis de dicto sale cancellari, precipiendo venditoribus quod infra tertium diem deberent dicto testi restituere suos denarios. Et postea dictus baiulus fecit fieri aliquas cridas, quod dicti venditores nichil deberent facere de dicto sale absque sua licentia. Et aliud dixit se nescire, quia in hoc dictus testis recessit illinc cum galeis.

THE DEPOSITION OF STEFANELO CONTARINI

December 19, 1374

f. 10r

1374 die XVIII decembris

Ser Stephanalus Contareno de confinio sancti Julianni coram dominis[[s]] advocatebus communis personaliter constitutus testis juratus, interrogatus et examinatus dicere veritatem de hiis super quibus interrogabatur super querela facta contra nobilem virum ser Bartholameum Quirino, olim baiulum Nigropontis. Et primo, interrogatus quidquid scit de nuptiis quas dominus ser Bartholamius dicitur contraxisse de quodam suo filio cum quadam filia ser Nicole Sanuto, domini Andre, quas dicitur quod dominus ser Nicola et sui cohacte et per viam induiti fuerunt ad faciendum suo sacramento respondet et dicit quod ipse ivit Nigropontem cum galeis et tunc audivit dici quod dicte nuptie erant facte, aliqui dicebant quod erant facte voluntarie et aliqui dicebant quod erant facte per illos dominos de ca-Sanuto tamquam cohactos, sed a quibus audivisset dicere neque qualiter fuissent facte dicte nuptie ipse nesciret dicere, quia non ponebat mentem neque tangebat eum nec impedunt se in aliquo de sciendo de eis factis.

7. 8 post Andre del. contra voluntatem dicti ser Nicole, patri sui | 9 post faciendum del. dictas nuptias | 15 post nec del. debe

Interrogatus si scit quod dictus ser Bartholameus, baiulus, occaxione dictarum nuptiarum seu pro ipsis nuptiis, miserat umquam aliquam de galeis communis, quas ipse baiulus miserat acceptum pro custodia et securitate terre, ad levandum dictos dominos de ca Sanuto seu dictam noviciam, 20 deserendo terram, respondet et dicit quod, de tempore quo ipse testis fuit in Nigroponte, ipse nescivit quod aliqua galea communis mitteretur, occaxione dictarum nuptiarum, ad levandum aliquos dominos neque noviciam ||neque per alium modum||. Sed est verum quod prima vice, qua ipse testis fuit in Nigroponte et quando sentivit de nuptiis predictis, in eo tempore quo ipse 25 testis stetit in Nigroponte, ipse scivit quod dicta novicia venit in Nigropontem et venit cum una galea, que ut sibi videtur fuit galea communis. Sed quomodo venisset seu quomodo esset dictum factum ipse testis nescit. Verum dicit quod postea, dum ipse testis recesisset de Nigroponte et redivisset, in reditu suo, qui fiat de mense julio nuper elapso, ipse testis audivit publice 30 dici quod de galeis communis iverant pro istis factis nuptiarum, sed quod aliter scia[n]t ipse testis nichil scit.

Interrogatus si scit de aliqua gratia furmenti vel blaudi seu aliorum victualium, que ipse baiulus permisisset extrahere de insula Nigropontis, existente ibi incomodo et caritudine, respondet et dicit quod ipse a se nichil 35 scit. Sed isto mense julio nuper elapso, quando ipse testis rediit Nigropontem, existente in Nigroponte caritudine blaudi, ipse audivit dicere quod ipse baiulus consentiverit aliquibus quod bladum extraheretur de insula, sed quibus consentivisset seu quantitatem ipse firmiter non posset dicere, nisi 40 quod audivit dicere quod consentiverat duce Arcipelagi et ser Nicole Sanuto et aliis de quibus non recordatur. ||Sed bene audivit pauperes homines murmurare et clamare per terram de incomodo blaudi quod erat et est ad presens in Nigroponte.|| Interrogatus si scit quod fecisset fieri aliquid banum idem baiulus quod non extraheretur per aliquem propter incomodum quod habebat terra et postea permitteret extrahere, respondet quod de hoc 45 nichil scit.

f. 10v Item interrogatus si scit quod dictus dominus baiulus miserit alias galeas, armatas expensis communis, in subsidio domini Bonifacii et domini Aluysii, contra illos de Sentinis, respondet quod bene vidi armari in baiulus illos miserit seu ad cuius petitionem aliter eo quod superius dixit nesciret dicere, neque de paga qualiter eis solutum fuerit, neque de panne communis sibi dato, ipse testis nichil scit. Et dicta galera et galeote poterit 55 stare in d[icta terr]a circa per octo dies.

Interrogatus si scit quod dominus baiulus predictus iret extra terram Nigropontis, stando per aliquid tempus quod non rediret intra terram, respondet quod, existente ipso testi in Nigroponte, ipse scivit quod una vice 60 dictus ser Bartholameus, baiulus, ivit Lilantum, ostendendo quod iret propter gravitate sue persone, et stetit extra circha quinque vel sex dies, quod non venit intra terra, et de alio nescit. Bene audivit dici, quod una alia vice, testis non ente in Nigroponte, ipse baiulus per similem modum iverat ad Argaleum et ibi steterat aliquibus diebus.

Interrogatus si scit quod dictus ser Bartholameus, baiulus, fecerit verberare 65 aliquem piscatorem que faciebat piscare quia non cepisset pisces, respondet quod ipse non fuit presens, sed audivit bene dici quod, dum ipse ser Bartholameus fecisset aliquos piscatores piscare cum una tracta, et tracta non fecisset sacham sed fuisse subversa, dictus ser Bartholameus 70 fecerat verberare dictos piscatores quia interponeret illos quod fecerint studiose et aliud ipse testis nescit.

 cohactos, suo sacramento respondit et dicit quod ipse testis audivit dici a 10 Jacobo Bocarammo, vicario domini Nicole a Carceribus in Nigroponte, quod, pro aliqua discordia que erat inter ser Nicolam Sanuto et dominum Nicolam a Carceribus, dictus ser Nicola Sanudo tractaverat quod dominus Bartholameus baiulus intromitteret se in ponendo concordiam inter ipsos, promittendo sibi, quod in casu quo dictus dominus baiulus faceret quod 15 dominus duca daret sibi insulam Andre ad ||censum||, ipse ser Nicola daret sibi filia sua pro filio suo, dicendo quod dominus baiulus miserat pro ipso domino duca et pro ser Nicola predicto occasione predicta galeam Nigropontis. Et est verum quod, quando ipse testis venit in Nigropontem, ipse invenit ducam venisse in Nigroponte cum ser Nicola Sanuto et cum aliis qui 20 sunt de consilio dicti domini duce. Et sicut ipse testis fuerit in Nigroponte dominus ducas misit pro ipso testi, unde ipse testis ivit ad eum. Et sicut dominus ducas vidi eum, ipse dominus ducas habuit dicere: «In nomine illius alterius vide[re]t tibi p[.....] res illa quam facit mihi dominus baiulus, quod ipse tenet me clausum in domo, ut ego dem sibi meam sororem magnam.

 in hunc modum, videlicet, ||quod|| ibi audivit dominum baiulum dicere ser
 35 Nicoli Sanuto, presente ser Nicola a Carceribus, duca, et aliis pluribus nobilibus: «Ser Nicola, estis vos contentus dare mihi vostram filiam, Lisiam,

Et, pro securitate huius promissionis, dominus baiulus voluit quod dominus

Januensium, et tunc dictus ser Guilielmus portavit ser Nicolam predictum et noviciam cum tota familia dicti ser Nicole de Nigroponte in Andre, de aliis nescit. Et audivit [...] dici a ser Petro Superançio quod ipse fuerat bis cum sua galea in Andre et audivit dici quod eciam fuerat ser Zaninus Miani et ser Andreas de Musto cum suis galeis. Et audivit dici a ser Mapheo Tirapele quod ipse ||cum galeota Nigropontis|| eciam una vice portaverat in Andre ser Nicolam Sanuto cum sua familia. Interrogatus si dicte galee erant misse pro securitate Nigropontis quando iverant in istis servitiis, respondet quod sic, secundum quod hoc erat omnibus publicum.

Item interrogatus si scit quod dictus ser Bartholomeus, baiulus, existente incomodo blaudi in Nigroponte, permitteret vel faceret gratiam alicui extrahendi furmentum vel blaudum de insula, in preiudicium seu periculum dicte insule, et maxime tempore | quo dubitabatur de aventu galearum Januensium, f. 3r respondit quod, existente ipso teste ad Loreum, ipse vidit unam galeotam ser Antonii d'Arduino porta[n]te prout credit bene mile mensurarum de Nigroponte, que erat onusta, ut dicebant, furmento et ibat in Salonico, unde ipsi extraxissent dictum furmentum ipse testis non potest scire, sed tunc erat bene incomodum baludi in Nigroponte. Et audivit dici quod dicta galiota fuerat 85 una alia vicem Salonico cum furmento unde quod tunc non erat incomodum vel caritudo furmenti.

Item diceret quod una alia vice, dum ipse adhuc foret in Loreo, ipse vidit galeotam domini duce, que onerabat furmento ibi, et ivit eciam usque ad castrum Manduci ad levandum furmentum et portavit illum ad insulam 95 Nicosie. Et tunc erat magna caritudo furmenti et, potest dici, fames in Nigroponte et hoc fuit isto mense augusto nuper elapso. Et in dicto tempore non poterat haberi pannis. Verum dicit quod, dum ipse testis veniret in Nigroponte, ipse vidit et audivit quod, propter magnum incomodum et magnam caritudinem furmenti que erat in Nigroponte, omnes clamabant et 100 murmurabant dicentes dominus baiulus misit ad temptandum insulam Nigropontis, pro possendo vedere quantum furmentum erat ||in insula||, et misit expensis communis. Et postea, quando ipse invenit ||sciret|| furmentum quod erat in insula, ipse permisit extrahere illud. Et adhuc peius, quod, postquam ipse dixit ser Petro Maçanigo quod videret de recuperando mitteret aliquas[[s]] galeas vel galeotas Nigropontis, pro auxillio quellorum de Stivis, contra illos de Setinis, cum sinistro illorum de Nigroponte et in preiudicium dicte terre, respondit quod ipse audivit aliquos 125 ||marinerios|| de Fitileo, qui se invenerant in Nigroponte cum duabus barchis, multum conqueri dicentes quod, dum essent in Nigroponte, dictus ser Bartholamius, baiulus, fecerat eos capi per vim et poni in galea. Et quod miserat unam galeam ||Nigropontis|| et duas galeotas contra illos ||dell||

 145 respondidit, quod dominus baiulus promisserat facere eam banderiam sibi scribere, et ita ipse fecit scribere. Sed, antequam scripta fuisse sibi, Simon recipiebat tamen pagas et dabat certa parte dicto Marco, secundum quod dictus Marcus sibi dixit. [Sed] quantitatem quam sibi daret, dictus Marcus [bene] dixit sibi, [sed] ipse testis non recordatur.
- 150 Interrogatus si scit de donis aliquis receptis per baiulum a ser Nicola Sanuto vel ab aliis personis, respondit quod scit quod habuit a ser Nicola Sanuutto duos equos et aliquos caretulos vini. Si fuerint per donum nescit, nisi quod per auditum quod audivit dici quod ipse habuerat eos per dono, de aliis nescit.
- 155 Interrogatus si scit de aliis commissis per dictum ser Bartholameum contra honorem dominationis et in dampno terre predicte Nigropontis, respondit quod nescit, nisi quod ||scit quod||, propter aliqua debita que judei ||de Nigroponti|| h[abere] debebant a Catlannis, dictus dominus baiulus cepit guerram cum Catalannis que fuit verecundia dominationis et magnum dapnum terre et periculum, maxime quia tunc [...] dubitabatur de galeis Januensium et quia caritudo furmenti que erat venit multo maior.

communis personaliter constitutus testis iuratus et examinatus dicere verita-tem super his super quibus interrogabitur. Et primo, si dictus dominus baiu-5 lus fecit aliquam violentiam alicui persone ut asentiret matrimonio predicto, respondit quod nescit, quia dictus testis non fuerat in Nigroponte tempore quo fuit contractum dictum matrimonium.

Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus fecit depositari aliquos denarios, occaxione dicti matrimonii, respondit quod, ut alia pars non traheret se 10 retro, dictus testis audavit publice dici quod aliqua quantitas denariorum fuerat depositata per aliam partem, sed quantitatem certam nesciret dicere, || nisi quod audavit dici, quod fuerant II M ducatos et hoc dicebatur publice per omnes de Nigropontem. Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus habuit dictos denarios qui sic fuerant depositati, respondit quod de hoc nihil sciret 15 dicere.

Item interrogatus si, occasione dicti matrimonii, fuerint misse aliue galee communis in Andre per dictum dominum baiulum, respondit quod de hoc nil aliud scit, nisi quod ipse bene scit, quod dictus dominus baiulus missit dominum Iohannem Miani cum sua galea in Andre, sed qua de causa 20 dictus testis nesciret dicere, et illuc etiam missit ser Guilielmum Quirino fratrem suum, sed qua de causa dictus testis nesciret dicere. Et etiam est verum quod dictus dominus baiulus missit dictum testem duabus vicibus redditu dictus testis deberet ire in Andre et elevare super galea sua nurum suam, scilicet filiam parvam dicti domini Nicole Sanudho et duceret eam Nigropontem, et ita fecit dictus testis.*

30 Interrogatus si dictus dominus baiulus missit aliquas galeas in auxilium ||illorum|| de Setines, super quibus galeis dictus dominus baiulus missit et fecit ascendere aliquos cives Nigropontis, quibus non fuit facta aliqua solutio, respondit quod est verum quod dictus dominus baiulus missit galeam Nigropontis et duo ligna parva ad illos de Setines et, ut dicebatur, pro ponendo concordiam inter illos de Stives et illos de Setines, qui habebant gueram in simul, super qua galea et lignis dictus dominus baiulus fecit ascendere quam plures habitatores Nigropontis, sed si eis fuit facta solutio vel non, dictus testis nesciret dicere.

35 Interrogatus super facto exeniorum, respondet quod de hoc nil alliud scit, nisi quod bene scit, quod dictus dominus Nicola, facto dicto matrimonio, mitebat multa exeniam dicto domino baiulo et sic faciebat dictus baiulus dicto domino Nicole.

A.S.V., Avogaria di Comun, Raspe, reg. 3643/3, f. 66v.

THE SENTENCE OF THE COURT

July 22, 1375

die XII julii

Nobilis vir ser Bartolomeus Quirino, contra quem processum fuit per dominos advocatoris communis, in eo et pro eo quod, dum ipse Bartolomeus esset baiulus et capitaneus Nigropontis, ipse contrafecit sue commissioni in sex capitolis sibi oppositis. Primum, videlicet, quod ipse, contra deum jus et justitiam et contra formam sue commisionis, pro possendo contrahere matrimonium de quodam suo filio cum filia ser Nicole Sanuto, fecit multas novitates et violentias nobili viro ser

Nicole a Carceribus, duce Arcipelagi, fratri dicte domine, et dicto ser Nicole, patri eiusdem domine, propter que ipsos tamquam cohactos opportunt assentire et contrahere dictum matrimonium. Secundo, quod, dum galee Culphi deputate ad custodiam Nigropontis deberent stare ibi per custodia dicte terre, ipse misit eas pluries huc et illuc occasione dicti matrimonii. Tercio, quod ipse misit unam ex eis galeis Corantum in favorem domini Raynerii, socii Saraceni, pro capiendo aliquos suos subditos proditores. Quarto, quod, dum esset magna necessitas furmenti et blaudi in Nigroponte et fecisset fieri proclamationes quod nullus auderet extrahere bladum de insula Nigropontis, ipse, contra hoc mandatum, permisit extrahere multum furmentum extra insulam Nigropontis in magnum sinistrum dicte terre et hominum eius. Quinto, cum, dum aliqui de Nigroponte velent extrahere salem de Nigroponte cum obligatione apportanti totidem furmenti, ipse nullo modo voluit assentire. Sexto, quod ipse. tempore sui regiminis, recepit multa exenia et dona ab aliquibus, contra honorem dominacionis et formam sue commissionis. Prout de predictis clare patet per processum camare dominorum communis ductum et placitatum fuit in consilio maiori, in quo possita fuit pars. Si videtur vobis per ea que dicta et lecta [...] quod procedatur contra nobilem virum ser Bartolomeum Quirino, olim baiulum et capitaneum Nigropontis, qui contrafecit in sex capitolis, sibi oppositis, in dicto regimine contra honorem dominationis et formam sue commissionis, ut dictum est. Nam datis et receptis in ipso consilio balotis 446, fuerunt: non sinceri 75 . 72, de non 149 . 154, et de parte 219 . 230. Et captum fuit de procedendo et tandem positis diversis partibus, captum fuit quod iste ser Bartholomeus privetur perpetuo quod non possit esse rector in insula Nigropontis et solvat ducatos centum. Et de predictis, seu aliquo predictorum, non possit fieri gratiam, donum, remissio, recompensatio vel declaratio aliqua sub pena ducatorum MM, pro quolibet consilio, capite vel alio ponente vel consentiente partem in contrarium.
