To Demetris

PREFACE

The present work was planned as part of the Prosopography of Ancient Macedonia, a project entrusted to me in 1980 by Professor M.B. Sakellariou, the founder and director, at that time, of the Centre for Greek and Roman Antiquity, to whom I would like, once more, to express my gratitude for the opportunity given to me. The planning of the work has already been reported as part of the project in the Symposium Ancient Macedonia IV in 1983. As progress was made in the collection of names of Macedonians attested epigraphically outside Macedonia, it became possible to make reference to this material in my writings on the Macedonian onomasticon. In 1990 the first lists were drawn up, but the project was subsequently modified by my decision to include also persons known only from literary sources, so as to produce a work useful to both the historian and the archaeologist, who needs a comprehensive listing in order to handle newly discovered epigraphical texts.

Collection of additional material, as well as work on other projects such as my forthcoming study based on the Roman nomina of Macedonia, delayed the completion of the present volume; the composition of the entries took place between 1994-96.

Most of the research and writing was done in Athens at the Centre for Greek and Roman Antiquity of the National Hellenic Research Foundation, where I have the privilege to be employed and where my efforts to produce this work found the support needed for its completion. An indispensable supplement to the facilities of the Centre were frequent visits to two excellent libraries, conveniently located near my home, namely the American School of Classical Studies and the Ecole Française d'Athènes.

Pleasant breaks during this period were my visits to institutions outside Greece. My longest stay abroad was during the winter of 1990/91 in New York, as a Fulbright scholar, thanks to an invitation from Professor Spyros Vryonis, the then director of the Onassis Center for Hellenic Studies of New York University. In New York I also had the chance to use the library of Columbia University, thanks to the hospitality of Professor Roger Bagnall.

My stays in the American Academy in Rome in 1994 and in the Istituto Ellenico at Venice in 1996 (at the invitation of its late director Professor Nikolaos M. Panagiotakis) gave me the change of scene and the inspiration I needed at turning points in my work.

Participation in conferences gave me during this period an opportunity for unforgettable journeys to a variety of places, among them Georgia, Ukraine, China and Egypt, thanks to invitations from Professors Otar Lordkipanitze, Wang Dunshu and Mohamed Mahgoub, and Dr E. Iakovenco.

Two visits to the University of Oxford, in 1988 and early in 1997, in connection with the British Academy's Lexicon of Greek Personal Names project, marked the early and the final stages of this work. It is with great pleasure that I recall the times spent in the friendly company of the editors of the Lexicon, Peter M. Fraser and Elaine Matthews, and I want to express to them my gratitude for their assistance. I feel I owe much to Peter Fraser, and I consider it a great honour that someone with his deep knowledge of the ancient Greek world offered, bravely, to read my manuscript. His advice and comments contributed substantially to the improvement of the present book, but he is responsible neither for my methodology nor for any errors that still remain.

Miltiades B. Hatzopoulos, with his great experience in Macedonian matters, helped me again, as he has often done in the past, with his advice; his friendly interest and encouragement as well as his example were a stimulus during various stages of this work.

Knowing the difficulties I would have in getting permission to use the relevant material I did not search for evidence in unpublished inscriptions; nevertheless some has been included. The inclusion of additional Macedonians known from Oropos I owe to Dr Basileios Chr. Petrakos, General Secretary of the Archaeological Society at Athens, who generously supplied me with the indexes of the Macedonians from his unpublished corpus of the inscriptions of Oropos. Macedonians mentioned in funerary monuments found in Demetrias were not published in their entirety by A.S. Arvanitopoulos. I was given permission to look for the unpublished ones through the files of the 13th Ephoreia of Antiquities in the Archaeological Museum of Volos, and my search there was facilitated thanks to Anthe Eustathiou-Batsiou and Georgia Malakasiotou.

There are some more persons I want to thank. Louisa Loukopoulou, friend and colleague for many years, has always been available for fruitful discussion. Ilias Arnaoutoglou, the assistant editor of the Lexicon in Oxford, has checked my collection of Macedonians known from papyri and increased their number. Rhea Micha, the librarian of our Centre, has assisted me constantly and willingly. Vangelis Frangopoulos, the computer system administrator of our Centre, succeeded in teaching me the use of PC and Windows and made the necessary conversions in my texts. Eirene Kalogridou meticulously typed the early lists and charmingly offered to help when additional work was needed. Finally I want to express my gratitude to Pege Kalogerakou; she has heroically typed in innumerable changes, prepared some of the indexes and set the book on the computer, at the same time that she was defending her dissertation.

This book is dedicated with love to Demetris N. Kouroupis, my husband. I promised him, some time ago, that with this Prosopography my involvement in the field of books to be used, rather than books to be read, will be terminated. I am not certain that promise will be kept.

INTRODUCTION

This collection of Macedonians started as a project on a much more limited scale, as it was originally designed to include only the Macedonians attested with their ethnics (those of their region or of their city) on inscriptions found outside Macedonia. The description of the original plan, a review of the earlier contributions and the special characteristics of this collection have already been presented in the Xth International Congress on Greek and Latin Epigraphy;¹ it is however necessary to repeat some of it in this Introduction.

The first collection of epigraphical evidence on Macedonians attested outside Macedonia was included in the corpus of inscriptions of Macedonia by M. Demitsas, a work published in 1896,² but which was not exhaustive even at the time it appeared. Ch. Edson's list of the Θεσσαλονικεῖς attested abroad, in the volume of IG X published in 1972,³ is also incomplete. Monographs on Macedonian cities, such as those on Amphipolis by J. Papastavrou,⁴ on Olynthos by M. Gude,⁵ on Pella by D. Papakonstantinou-Diamantourou,⁶ the paper of J. Alexander on Cassandreia⁷ and more recently the Prosopographies of Beroea and Edessa,⁸ include in varying degrees of completeness the persons originating from these cities and attested either outside or elsewhere inside Macedonia. I. Russu's Macedonian onomasticon, published in 1938, also includes an extensive collection of the relevant material.⁹ D. Kanatsoulis' Macedonian Prosopography¹⁰ also includes Macedonians attested abroad of the Roman and Christian periods, when the instances of this category of persons become fewer. M. Launey's work, Recherches sur les armées hellénistiques,¹¹ offered an extensive collection of Macedonian military personnel mostly from Egypt. As is well known, the Ptolemies as well as the Seleucids employed soldiers called in our literary sources "Macedonians;"¹² in both kingdoms there was a system of military settlements where Macedonians and other Greeks had originally been settled. In Syria not only the names of Macedonian cities were transferred and used as the names of the new settlements but also other Macedonian toponyms were applied to geographical features.¹³ The study of Macedonian colonies in Asia has an extended history, initiated by the publication of G. Radet's thesis;¹⁴ numerous opinions have been expressed on the subject since then, as well as on the meaning of Μακεδών, to mention only (in chronological order) those of A. Schulten,¹⁵ M. Holleaux,¹⁶ G.T. Griffith,¹⁷ L. Robert,¹⁸ Ch. Edson,¹⁹ D. Musti,²⁰ P. Herrmann,²¹ and more recently those of G.M. Cohen²² and R.A. Billows.²³ To what extent not only such military personnel but also persons involved in the civilian administration were really Macedonians, especially after the third century, is a subject that has been much discussed.²⁴ Having taken into account the various views expressed on this topic, we have decided to include all references to Macedonians in papyri as well as those on stone.

of the relevant testimonia in the discussion of each city; out of a total of 215 names of sites dating from the period of the Roman conquest discussed by the author, 124 are classified as cities. A large percentage of them is known from Stephanus Byzantius, who mentions a total of 159.²⁶ The names as well as the ethnics of some of them, including Sindos and Therme, have not yet been attested epigraphically, while more than 30 are known only from a single inscription which preserves more often the name of a kome or another local toponym than that of a city; Γαιμεῖον, Βλάγανοι among them.²⁷ Some of the inscriptions referring to Macedonians abroad have preserved otherwise unknown and unlocatable toponyms, for instance that of Σάτυρος Γόλυος, Μακεδὼν Πράσσιος, buried in Attica,²⁸ two other persons attested in Gonnoi, one a Μακεδὼν ἐξ Ἀρκυνίας, the second a Μακεδὼν ἐξ Ἐρκείας,²⁹ two more in Demetrias originating from the same place (a Μακεδὼν Δεγμαῖος and a Μακέτη Δεγμαία),³⁰ a Μακεδὼν Βονθίτης from Larissa, etc.³¹ The only citizens we know of some Macedonian cities are those attested in a very important document, the list of the Delphic theorodokoi, as for example those of Klitai and Oion.³² The list contains the cities, in roughly geographical order, not the ethnics of the listed theorodokoi; thus for some of the cities listed, as for example for Mieza, there is still no epigraphical attestation of its ethnic which according to the literary tradition is Μιξεύς and Μιξαῖος.³³ Ἰωρον, a Macedonian city known only from Ptolemy, is epigraphically attested by the ethnic of two of its citizens, one in an inscription found in Beroea the other found in Morrylos.³⁴ Two citizens of Kombreia, a city of Chalkidike, are attested in Styberra, in an ephebic list of the first century A.D.,³⁵ six centuries after the only other existing reference to the city, that of Herodotos (VII 123). The majority of the epigraphical testimonia refers simply to Μακεδόνες, without any further clarification; thus we have Μακεδών following a man's name and for women Μακέτη or Μακέτα and Μακέτις.³⁶ In some of the other evidence the name of the city follows the definition Μακεδών, as e.g. Μακεδών ἐξ Αἰγεῶν,³⁷ Μακεδών ἐγ Βεροίας,³⁸ Μακεδών ἐγ Δίου,³⁹ Μακεδών ἀπὸ Δοβήρου,⁴⁰ Μακεδών or Μακέτη ἐξ Ἑδέσσης,⁴¹ Μακεδών ἐκ Πέλλης⁴² or more explicitly the local ethnic for the region is added, followed by the name of the city, as in Μακεδόνι Ἐλειμιώτῃ ἐκ Πυθείου.⁴³

The epigraphical testimonia relevant to Macedonians are dated from the 5th century onwards; some of the ethnics connected with certain cities occur for a shorter period than others as a result of the abolition of the Macedonian state by the Romans, after which a number of cities lost their autonomy: no citizens e.g. of Aigeai and Mieza are to be found after this time.⁴⁴ The Prosopography also includes persons originating from areas later incorporated in the Macedonian kingdom, as e.g. the Amphipolitans, or before the Roman settlement of 167 B.C., as e.g. the Paeonians.⁴⁵

When the collection of the Macedonians abroad as defined above was completed and the first lists were formed, with the name of each person, the place where the inscription was found, the type of the inscription and the information about each individual supplied by it, the need to search for relevant literary references became apparent.⁴⁶ At this stage of the work, that of examining the Macedonians known from ancient authors, it soon became evident that some of these persons were also mentioned in inscriptions and that frequently their names were not followed by an ethnic in the literary text; naturally they also had to be included. The frame of the collection had to be broadened to include everyone who played a part in the public life of Macedonia, mentioned by ancient literary or epigraphical sources.⁴⁷ Furthermore the publication of new material has broadened the number of historical persons attested in epigraphical texts, found within their home town⁴⁸ or outside.⁴⁹ My belief that a work of this kind should primarily be useful to a scholar confronted with the presentation of new inscriptions of a public character, provides a further reason for widening this collection. The resulting collection of material is admittedly somewhat distant from the Macedonians Abroad, as originally conceived. The title however has been retained, and it will be understood, I hope, that in order to present properly the Macedonians abroad it was necessary to include all the other individuals as well.

In the search for Macedonians known from literary sources the works of O. Hoffmann, Die Makedonen and the Prosopography of contemporaries of Alexander III by H. Berve⁵⁰ remain basic. A new discussion with supplementary bibliography on most of the persons treated by H. Berve is given in the work of W. Heckel.⁵¹ Monographs on a number of Macedonian kings, to mention only those by W.W. Tarn, F.W. Walbank, P. Meloni, P. Briant and R.A. Billows,⁵² contain references to most or all their contemporary persons known from literary sources. The volumes of FGH, RE and PP have added a number of individuals to our lists or additional references to those already collected; naturally one cannot be certain that all the material in these works has been exhausted.

I must also refer to some further modifications of the original plan that the development of the work has necessitated. In presenting the progress of this project I stated that "kings of Macedonia as well as the members of the dynasties of the Hellenistic kingdoms, also of Macedonian descent, are not included in this Prosopography," noting some exceptions to this rule.⁵³ Further work on some entries led me to realize that the exceptions to this rule would have to be so many that it would be absurd to retain it. How could Περδίκκας Ἀλεξάνδρῳ (q.v.) be excluded? It would be irrational to do so since he is the first person listed in one of the most important documents for 5th century Macedonian history;⁵⁴ the same applies to Ἀρχέλαος, his son, the later king Archelaos I, mentioned in the same inscription. Consequently the kings of Macedonia and the members of their families are included if Macedonians,⁵⁵ as well as the members of the dynasties of the Hellenistic kingdoms. Besides their Macedonian descent it is well known that the Ptolemies were proud to call themselves Macedonians.⁵⁶ I have however referred to the kings very briefly without biographical details and references to the sources which would add unnecessarily to the size of this volume, since existing and readily available monographs fully document the epigraphical and literary sources. The kings of Macedonia (including Antigonos Monophthalmos whom we accept that he was a native of Beroea⁵⁷) are listed under plain Makedon. The founders of the Hellenistic kingdoms are listed under their city of origin, their successors and family under Makedon.⁵⁸ In addition to the kings and members of their families summary entries, preceded by an asterisk, are also given for some other individuals mentioned very frequently by ancient authors, e.g. Παρμενίων Φιλώτα, Φιλώτας Παρμενίωνος, Ἄρπαλος Μαχάτα and Μελέαγρος Νεοπολέμου (q.v.). Other entries also marked by an asterisk are for persons whose careers are not given in detail although complete references to the sources are given, as e.g. in the entries for Πέλοψ Πέλοπος and Πλείσταρχος Ἀντιπάτρου (q.v.).

Persons known only from literary sources are included in the same alphabetically arranged lists, numbered by a letter of the alphabet or by the city or region of Macedonia.⁵⁹ Persons of note who participated in contemporary historical events but are known only from inscriptions found in Macedonia, as for instance some royal Companions,⁶⁰ are not included, since, if they were, the problem of adding all the historically significant persons mentioned in Macedonian inscriptions would arise; the recent publication of the Epigraphic Appendix by M.B. Hatzopoulos⁶¹ made this further addition unnecessary.

Most people connected with Macedonian history of the Classical and Hellenistic periods mentioned by the literary sources as participants in political or military activity, such as Friends of the king etc., are normally mentioned without an ethnic unless they are from outside Macedonia. We assume that such individuals without an ethnic denomination were Macedonians and they have been included, although it is known that the Macedonian kings used non-Macedonians, mostly Greeks, in various posts and affairs even as Friends.⁶² It may be the case that my lists omit numerous officials of the Ptolemies and the Seleucids, for whom a Macedonian origin has at times been claimed, usually on the basis of their names, though these are in fact not exclusively Macedonian names.⁶³

Ethnics of cities or regions are included even if the personal name is missing, being considered as fragmentarily preserved names.

Persons attested as Μακεδών ἐκ [---], the name of the city missing, are classified in the category Unknown (city or region).

Macedonian settlers and colonists from Asia Minor attested with the ethnic Μακεδών followed by a toponym of this region are listed in the section Other Macedonians.⁶⁴

The majority of the persons included in this Prosopography date from the Hellenistic period, or more precisely, from the period before the Roman occupation; epigraphically attested Macedonians of the imperial period occur only rarely and the texts usually do not have any specifically Christian features. Thessalonike is the only city with relevant inscriptions of a Christian character as late as the 8th century A.D.; such persons could not reasonably be excluded and are listed separately as Thessalonike II.

Some of the persons attested in Egypt with the ethnic Μακεδών are also listed separately in Appendix I. On the ground that the later the date of the evidence for this category the more remote the possibility of its having an authentic meaning, all persons known from documents dated after 150 B.C. form a separate list;⁶⁵ the only exceptions are persons with ethnics of Macedonian cities, as e.g. Δημήτριος [Ο]λύνθιος (q.v.),⁶⁶ by reason of their rarity. Individuals recorded as both Μακεδών and Πέρσης have not been included.⁶⁷

The name of a person mentioned in an inscription without an ethnic has frequently been used as a criterion for his inclusion in this

63. Moreover the study of the names borne by the Macedonians has shown that common Greek names formed a very significant part of the onomasticon used by the Macedonian aristocracy, see e.g. Tataki, Beroea 424 and infra 36 nn. 74-79.

Prosopography. The contributions in the study of the Macedonian onomasticon have been numerous since the time of the publication of the first study of them by O. Hoffmann,⁶⁸ a work that retains its fundamental importance. I. Russu's monograph is still a useful guide, despite its omissions,⁶⁹ as it is still the only one of its kind. Contributions in the study of the Macedonian onomasticon are also to be found in J.N. Kalléris' important work.⁷⁰ Macedonian names have been discussed, as we shall see, in many of the writings of M. Holleaux, L. Robert and O. Masson. Contributions to the understanding of the Macedonian onomasticon have also been included in a number of volumes of the series Μελετήματα of the Centre for Greek and Roman Antiquity.⁷¹ Of primary importance are the recent publications of new epigraphical material from Macedonia which, among other important historical features, have added large numbers of new names of local character, keeping fresh our interest in the Macedonian onomasticon.⁷² In addition we are now more aware of the fact that a large percentage of the personal names borne by the Macedonians consisted of panhellenic names and, as has already been pointed out,⁷³ persons serving as Ptolemaic or Seleucid officials bearing common Greek names were very probably of Macedonian origin; they are however omitted from the present list since evidence is lacking for a specific origin. Among them are the military commander of Susiane at the

The criteria for the inclusion or omission of a person because of his name are in general more difficult to define than those exposed in the first part of this Introduction in the examination of the other factors that led to the inclusion of certain individuals. This becomes even more difficult for rare or rather rare names with local characteristics that have been attested in areas of the Greek world remote from each other. For the inclusion in our lists of persons without an ethnic two main questions had to be faced. The first, when considering a name hypothetically characterized as Macedonian, was whether this name has already been attested for a Macedonian in a literary or epigraphical source or in an inscription found in Macedonia. This has not always been so for some of the names characterized as such; with very few exceptions we have not included persons bearing a name classified as Macedonian simply on grounds of linguistic speculation. The second problem was dealing with some well defined Macedonian names, not those spread to the other areas of the Greek world during the Hellenistic period (Ἀλέξανδρος, Ἀντίγονος, Πτολεμαῖος etc.)⁸⁰ but those that continued to be transmitted from one generation to the next in Macedonia or in the areas where Macedonians settled, until they lost their meaning and disappeared; we have not included an exhaustive list of such names, especially the late instances. In Appendix III some of them are discussed; the bibliography supplied will

The size and the nature of this undertaking has prevented a continuous numeration of the entries. For the ethnics of cities, as well as for those of regions, we thought that it would be helpful for the historian-user to be able to estimate the importance of each on the basis of the number of individuals originating from it. Naturally it is also important to know the totals of each category. The total of persons with ethnics of cities is 1056, with ethnics of regions is 103, totalling, with the addition of Unknown (city or provenance), 1167 persons. For the persons listed under Makedon the numeration by letter of the alphabet, on the model of PIR, was simply easier to handle during the compilation of this work; their total is 1428. The total for the Prosopography (with the addition of Other Macedonians and the Appendix I of 268 persons) is 2872 persons.

81. We did not consider necessary to include here an "index commenté" on all the names included in our lists following the model of L. Robert in N. 7. Ἀλέξανδρος Μυλλ[έου] or Μυλλ[ένα], Μακεδὼν ἐγ Βεροίας 286/62 B.C.

Athens. Honoured by the boule and the demos of the Athenians with an award of citizenship. The decree with the honours was inscribed on a stele set up on the Athenian Acropolis and accompanied by a golden crown. Whatever the correct restoration of the patronymic (see Μυλλέας Ζωῖλου, Μυλλένας Ἀσάνδρου), he must have offered some important services to Athens. The inscription has recently been discussed by M.J. Osborne, who proposed the years given here to those given by Kirchner (295/4-276/5); he follows Kirchner's identification with a relative of Μυλλέας Ζωῖλου and not that with Μυλλένας Ἀσάνδρου, Μακεδὼν, proposed by A. Wilhelm (cited in IG II² Add. p. 665).

- *16. Ἀσανδρος Ἀγάθωνος, Μακεδών, Βεροιαῖος

Reign of Alexander III

Satrap of Caria after Alexander's death. Not the son of Ἀγάθων from Pydna. According to an unpublished inscription from the Perrhaibian Tripolis he was a Βεροιαῖος. He was on the side of Antigonos Monophthalmos and his allies Antipater and Krateros against Perdikkas; defeated by Ἀλκέτας Ὀρόντου and Ἄτταλος Ἀνδρομένου (q.v.) in 320 B.C. Later he was against Antigonos, aided by Εὐπόλεμος (q.v.); defeated by the general of Antigonos Πολεμαῖος II he became an ally of Antigonos (313/2 B.C.), giving his brother Ἀγάθων as a hostage for the fulfilment of the terms between them. At the same time he helped his brother escape and asked help from Ptolemy and Seleucos but Antigonos learned this and immediately captured all of Caria. He was honoured in Athens (314/3 B.C.); epigraphically attested in Miletos (314/3 B.C.), Stratonikeia, Amyzon (321/0 B.C.), Mylasa, Lagina (323, 318 B.C.).

- *37. Μίδων or Μείδων, Βεροιαῖος Reign of Perseus
 Person in the immediate entourage of Perseus, together with Ἰππίας and Πάνταυχος (q.v.), known for his activity during the events of the Third Macedonian War.
 Polyb. XXVII 8, 1 and 5; XXIX 15, 2; Plut., Aem. 16, 2; Livy XLIV 32, 9; 45, 2 and 7; XLV 32, 6.
 Ch. Edson, "The Antigonids, Heracles and Beroea," HSCP 45 (1934) 233 and n. 5; A. Modrzejewski, RE XV (1932) 1672 no 1; Milon; Meloni 233, 239, 361 n. 2, 367, 401; E. Olshausen, RE Suppl. XII (1970) 840-42 no 13; Μήδων; Olshausen 159-60 no 118; Walbank, Commentary I 33-34; III 306, 369, 383; Le Bohec, "Philoï" 114-15 no 18; Tataki, Beroea no 901. A recent publication of an inscription from Beroea includes among the persons listed, following a letter of Philip V, a Μείδων Με[---]; this attestation offers the correct spelling of the name and the possibility that this new person was the father of Perseus' official; see V. Allamani-Souri, E. Voutiras, "New documents from the sanctuary of Herakles Kynagidas at Beroea," Third International Symposium on Macedonia 1993, Inscriptions of Macedonia (Thessalonike 1996) 14 line 23, 25-26.
38. Μυλλέας Ζωῖλου, Βεροιαῖος Reign of Alexander III
 One of the two Beroeans known to have taken part in Alexander's expedition to Asia Minor (cf. Κοίρανος). He is listed by Arrian as the last of 25 Macedonian commanders of triremes. He was probably related to Ἀλέξανδρος Μυλλ[---] (q.v.) who was honoured by the boule and demos of the Athenians.

Arr., Ind. 18, 6.

Berve no 541; H. Berve, RE XVI (1933) 1073; cf. Ch. Edson, "The Antigonids, Heracles and Beroea," HSCP 45 (1934) 233; Osborne, Naturalization I 174; Tataki, Beroea no 909.

39. Μυλλένας Ἀσάνδρου, Μακεδών

Reign of Alexander III - c. 300 B.C.

Eretria. Honoured along with Tauron son of Machatas also a Macedonian probably after 323 B.C. The scale of the honours and privileges accorded him in this decree indicate that he was an important person, who was also probably a relative of Ἀλέξανδρος Μυλλ[---] (q.v.) or of Μυλλέας Ζωΐλου. He is probably the same as the Myllinas stated by Curtius (VIII 11.5) to be the secretary of Alexander the III.

Tataki, Beroea no 995.

*43. Πάνταυχος Βαλάκρου

Reign of Perseus

One of the First Friends of Perseus and a leading figure, together with Ἰππίας and Μίδων, during the critical years 172-168 B.C.

Polyb. XXVII 8, 5-6; XXIX 3, 3-4; Livy XLII 39, 7; XLIV 23, 2-4; 27, 8-12; 30, 14; 45, 2 and 7.

Berve, RE XVIII (1949) 694-95 no 3; Meloni 239, 327-28; Olshausen 162-64 no 121; Walbank, Commentary I 33-34; III 364, 369; Le Bohec, "Philoï" 115-16 no 20; Tataki, Beroea no 1011 and p. 423 for his possible descent from Πάνταυχος, the general of Demetrios Poliorcetes. His grandfather, Πάνταυ[χος Βαλάκ]ρου, was a priest of Asklepios in Beroea, attested in a list of the eponymous priests of the city, dated between 240-225 B.C.: V. Allamani-Souri, Deltion 39 (1984) [1990] Meletai 207 lines 23-24, 228 and M.B. Hatzopoulos, BullEpigr 1991, 389.

44. Περίτας Μενάνδρου, Βεροιαῖος 37 B.C.
Samothrace. In a list of initiates. The position of the ethnic between two blank spaces created some confusion as to the person to whom it should be attributed. The interpretation followed here is that of L. Robert. His name is followed by Διονύσιος Ἀρχεπόλεως, Ῥουφίων (Λ)έοντος and Ἀλυπος Λέοντος.
 Robert, Froehner 52-53, no 44, lines 18-21; IG XII,8 195 line 18: Πέρσας; M.N. Tod, "The Macedonian Era Reconsidered," Studies Presented to D.M. Robinson II (Saint Louis 1953) 388 no 141, 397; Kanatsoulis, MP no 1146: Πέρσας; Fraser, Samothrace II,1 100 n. 3; Tataki, Beroea no 1051.
45. Πολεμαῖος f. of Ἀρπαλος 178 B.C.
Delphi. Probably a descendant (grandson?) of the nephew of Antigonos Πολεμαῖος II (q.v.). The rarity of the name and the high social status of his son favours this hypothesis.

 Friend of Philip V, well-known court poet; in his three surviving epigrams, dated to 217 B.C., he speaks of Philip as a descendant of Herakles (Anth. Pal. VI 114, 115, 116). Son of the influential royal Friend Χρυσόγονος Πυρρίχου (q.v.) and brother of Πύρριχος Χρυσογόνου (q.v.).

22. Χρυσόγονος Πυρρίχου, Μακετοὺν ἐξ Ἑδέσσης Reign of Philip V
Larissa. A decree of the Larissaeans honouring him clarified the events that Polybios has reported and greatly increased our information on this important figure. Thanks to this source we learn that he was an Edessaian: Χρυσόγονος Πυρρίχειος, Μακετοὺν ἐξ Ἑδέσσης; on the basis of his father's name it can be concluded that the man of the same name, executed by Philip along with Σᾶμος, was also a son of Chrysogonos.
 This Friend of Philip V, with good influence on him, father of Πύρριχος (q.v.) and Σᾶμος (q.v.), protected Thessaly, in 218 B.C., from the Aetolians who aimed at overrunning it in order to divert Philip. In the decree, dated by K.I. Gallis between 220-210 B.C., he is called a friend and euergetes of the city of Larissa and given all the rights of a Larissaeian citizen.

- *6. Πευκέστας Ἀλεξάνδρου, Μιξεύς Reign of Alexander III
 Alexander's shieldbearer and one of the commanders of triremes. Brother of Ἀμύντας. Saved the king's life in India (325 B.C.) and was appointed royal bodyguard and a year later satrap of Persia, a post he kept successfully for a long time. In 323 B.C. he arrived in Babylon with an army of about 20.000 trained Persians who were enrolled in the Macedonian battalions. The rival of Eumenes for the command of the army, was defeated by Antigonos in the battle of Gabiene (317 B.C.) and removed from his satrapy. He settled in Caria and to the end he remained in the court of Antigonos; he is mentioned in an inscription of Theangela next to Εὐπόλεμος (q.v.).

1. Ἀμεινοκράτης, ἐν Οἴῳ 230-220 B.C.

Delphi. Delphic theorodokos at Oion. He is, probably correctly, assigned to Idomenai by F. Papazoglou; the problem would be then that Oion would appear in this list without a named theorodokos (see also Ἰκκότιμος, Idomenai).

A. Plassart, BCH 45 (1921) 17 III lines 67-68; cf. G. Daux, REG 62 (1949) 12-27 for the dating; Papazoglou, Villes 177 and n. 18.

OISYME: ΟΙΣΥΜΗ

1. Ἐπιγῆθης Τελεσίου, [ἐν Οἰσύμῳ] 230-220 B.C.

Delphi. Delphic theorodokos at Oisyme. Related to Τελεσίας Στράτωνος (q.v.) honoured by the Delphians, most probably the father of Ἐπιγῆθης.

A. Plassart, BCH 45 (1921) 18 III line 81 and p. 37; cf. G. Daux, REG 62 (1949) 12-27 for the dating.

PALIURA ? : ΠΑΛΙΟΥΡΑ ?

*1. Ἀντίπατρος Ἰολάου

Reigns of Philip II and Alexander III - 319 B.C.

One of Philip's leading Companions who served as military commander and envoy in important diplomatic missions. Probably already active under Perdikkas III since he described the king's Illyrian campaigns in his historical work: Πράξεις Ἰλλυρικαί. Appointed by Alexander as his administrator and general in charge of European affairs before his departure for Asia. Kept this post after Alexander's death. He was the leading statesman of the settlement of Triparadeisos; returned to Macedonia with the kings. He had left behind during his absence in Asia Πολυπέρχων Σιμμίον and appointed him his successor upon his return. Father of Κάσσανδρος, Φίλιππος, Ἀλέξαρχος, Ἰόλαος or Ἰόλλας, Πλεισταρχος, Νικάνωρ, Περίλαος and probably one more son Ἀρχίας (q.v.) as well as Φίλα, Νίκαια, Εὐρυδίκη and an unnamed daughter, the wife of Ἀλέξανδρος Λυγκηστής (q.v.).

20. Ἀριστόνους Πεισαίου, Πελλαῖος Reign of Alexander III - 316 B.C.
One of Alexander's bodyguards from Pella (Arr., Anab. VI 28, 4); listed among the commanders of triremes as Ἐορδαῖος (Arr., Ind. 18, 5).

Possibly the same as the homonym, without an ethnic or patronymic, listed in Nemea among the theorodokoi of the Nemean games of 323/2 B.C., as has been suggested by St.G. Miller. The editor discussed also a possible identification to Ἀριστόνους honoured in Eretria, as proxenos and euergetes, pointing out a peculiarity common to both attestations, an empty space where the ethnic should be written. Roof-tiles with the name Aristonous have been found in Pella. Cf. Ἀριστόνους (under Amphipolis).

*23. Ἀρχίας Ἀναξιδότου, Πελλαῖος

Reign of Alexander III

One of the commanders of triremes, a very distinguished Macedonian who acted under the directions of Nearchos. Probably related to Ἀναξίδωτος Ἀπολλοδώρου and Ἀπολλόδωρος Ἀναξιδότου, Macedonians honoured in Eretria.

24. Ἀρχων Κλείνου, Μακεδὼν ἐκ Πέλλης

333/2 B.C.

One of the nine Pellaeans listed among the commanders of triremes; in 323 B.C. he became the satrap of Babylonia. Honoured in Delphi along with his mother Σύνεσις and his brothers with proxenia; of his brothers only the name Ἰσοκράτης Κλείνου is preserved. The epigraphical evidence establishes the correct form of his patronymic. In the metrical inscription of the Delphic monument his victories in the Isthmia and Pythia are mentioned.

27. Αὐτόδικος Ἀγαθοκλέους Reign of Alexander III
 Bodyguard of Philip Arrhidaios (321 B.C.). Brother of Ἀλκίμαχος, Λυσίμαχος, and Φίλιππος. His relationship to Λυσίμαχος is attested in a monument erected by Lysimachos in honour of Ἀδεΐα, the wife of Αὐτόδικος, in the sanctuary of Amphiaraios in Oropos, where he is mentioned without his patronymic or ethnic.

2. Ἀδμητος Βόκρου, Θεσσαλονικεὺς and Μακεδών c. 230 B.C.
Delos. Known from three honorary decrees commemorating the extraordinary honours awarded to him; among them it is stated that two bronze statues of him were to be placed in the precinct of the temple of Apollo in Delos, next to the altar dedicated to Zeus Polieus, the first, and in Thessalonike, in a place to be decided by the bouleutai of the city, the second. Two of these decrees include the decisions of the Delians, the third, also found in Delos, is a copy of the approval of the boule and the demos of Thessalonike for the honours awarded to one of their fellow citizens, whom they also decided to honour. The last decree includes also the names and titles of the Thessalonikan magistrates who introduced the proposal to the boule. They are the ὑπεπιστάτης Σωσίπατρος and the δικασταί (according to the correction by S. Pelekides of the earlier ἀ[ρμ]οσταί): Μένανδρος, Νικόδημος, Φιλόδημος, Ἰππίας and [Π]αύσων. - *2. Ἀλκέτας Ὀρόντου Reign of Alexander III - 319 B.C.
 Brother of Περδίκκας and Ἀταλάντη. A prominent military commander; campaigned in Paraitakene and in India (327-26 B.C.). After Alexander's death he served as an officer of Perdikkas. He put to death Kynnane (q.v.) and was himself condemned to death after Triparadeisos (319 B.C.). After Antigonos defeated Eumenes in Pisidia, Alketas finally had to escape to Termessos, where although supported by the young Pisidians, fell victim to the treachery of the city's elders; to escape arrest he took his own life.

- *9. Κράτερος Ἀλεξάνδρου, ἐξ Ὀρεστίδος

Reign of Alexander III - 321 B.C.

One of the closest Friends and a highly esteemed general of Alexander; listed also with the commanders of triremes. He played a remarkable leading part in the siege of Tyre, in Gaugamela, in Persepolis, in Bactria and in India. His career during the Asian campaign is fully covered by the sources. He was the leader of the veterans sent back to Macedonia in 324 B.C. where he was to replace Antipater. The news about Alexander's death reached him in Cilicia where he also learned that he had been appointed the guardian of Philip III Arrhidaios. He and Antipater won a decisive victory at Krannon. Brother of Ἀμφοτερός; married to Φίλα Ἀντιπάτρου. He crossed the Hellespont with Antipater in 321 B.C. soon to fall in a battle against Eumenes.

Mentioned in many lists of donations in Delos and without an ethnic or patronymic in a decree of Ephesos dated 322 B.C.; also mentioned in the verse inscription of Delphi, accompanying the group of bronze statues, a work of Lysippos and Leochares, representing the royal hunt at Susa (Plut., Alex. 40, 5).

- *12. Περδίκκας Ὀρόντου, ἐξ Ὀρεστίδος Reigns of Philip II and Alexander III - 321 B.C.

Bodyguard of Philip and one of the persons who killed Πανσανίας Κεράστου. Commander of the battalion of the phalanx from Orestis and Lynkestis, a leading figure throughout the Asian campaign, one of the seven bodyguards and a Friend of Alexander; listed among the commanders of triremes after Κράτερος Ἀλεξάνδρου (q.v.). He was given Alexander's ring as the king was dying and so, as W. Heckel has pointed out, he deserves to be considered the first of the Diadochoi. He was killed in Memphis by his own men, who had conspired against him under Πείθων Κρατεῦα, during a disastrous campaign against Ptolemy.

*4. Ἀτταλος Ἀνδρομένους, Τυμφαῖος

Reign of Alexander III - 317 B.C.

Commander of infantry during the Asian expedition and a trireme commander. Brother of Ἀμύντας, Πολέμων and Σιμμία (q.v.). Married to Perdikkas' sister Atalante. He was sent by Perdikkas to prevent the funerary carriage of Alexander from being taken to Egypt. He learned of Perdikkas' death in Pelusion (321 B.C.); as the commander of the fleet he sailed to Tyre and became the head of the rest of Perdikkas' forces; campaigned against Rhodes and Knidos, refused to ally himself with Eumenes and, acting on Antipater's orders, defeated Asandros (together with Alketas). He was captured with others, including Πολέμων, his brother, and Δόκιμος (q.v.), by Antigonos (319 B.C.), and was imprisoned in a fortress in Pisidia near Kelainai; they tried unsuccessfully to free themselves and most probably were killed when arrested again (317 B.C.).

5. Πολέμων Ἀνδρομένους

Reign of Alexander III

The youngest brother of Ἀμύντας, Ἀτταλος and Σιμμία (q.v.). He fled when he heard that Philotas was tortured; he was brought back by his brother Attalos; his return was recognised as a proof of his brothers' innocence and led to their acquittal. He was sent by Perdikkas with his brother Attalos (no 4) to prevent the funerary carriage of Alexander from being taken to Egypt. After Perdikkas' death he was captured with some others, including Attalos his brother and Δόκιμος (q.v.), by Antigonos (319 B.C.), and were imprisoned in a fortress in Pisidia near Kelainai; they tried unsuccessfully to free themselves and were probably killed when arrested again (317 B.C.).

- *6. Πολυπέρχων Σιμμίου Reign of Alexander III - 301 B.C.
 Commander of the Tymphaians; he replaced Πτολεμαῖος Σελεύκου (q.v.), after Issos (333 B.C.). He was included among the veterans sent home from Opis (324 B.C.) as the second-in-command of Κράτερος Ἀλεξάνδρου (q.v.). One of the protagonists in the events of the years of the Successors' fighting for the supremacy over the European part of Alexander's Empire. He succeeded Antipater as a regent (319 B.C.) and clashed with Cassander. He brought Herakles, the son of Alexander III and Barsine, to his native Tymphaia; Cassander was threatened, and persuaded Polyperchon to kill the young prince (Diod. XX 28) (309 B.C.). He probably died before Ipsos (301 B.C.). Father of Ἀλέξανδρος (q.v.).

Reign of Alexander III

Governor of Lydia (334 B.C.); next year he defeated the Persian Orontobates and in 329/8 he joined Alexander with a Greek mercenary force for the conquest of Bactria. Probably a brother of Παρμενίων. It is possible that there are two persons since only in one case, Arr, Anab. I 17, 7, is his name followed by the patronymic Φιλώτας. The rest of the references could possibly refer to ᾽Ασανδρος ᾽Αγάθωνος, Βεροιαῖος (q.v.).

- *84. Δόκιμος, Μακεδών Reign of Alexander III - end of 4th cent. B.C.
His prominence immediately after Alexander's death shows that he must have been an important officer in Alexander's army. He had an adventurous career; in 321 B.C. he became satrap of Babylonia, being sent there by Perdikkas. Later, having fought against Antigonos he entered his service (312 B.C.) and became the strategos of central Phrygia. There he founded the town named Dokimeion after him. Finally, when Lysimachos invaded Asia Minor (302 B.C.), he joined him and helped him to take over Synnada and the royal treasuries.

27. Ἐρμόλαος Σωπόλεως, Μακεδών Reign of Alexander III
 Royal page, follower of Καλλισθένης (q.v.); he was punished by the king for killing a wild boar that the king himself was hunting. He conspired to kill Alexander along with Σώστρατος Ἀμύντα, Ἀντίπατρος Ἀσκληπιοδώρου, Ἐπιμένης Ἀρσέου and others; the conspiracy of the pages was revealed, he was arrested and confessed, saying that as a free man he could no longer endure Alexander's arrogance and cruelty. To the end he and his confederates steadily refused to implicate Kallisthenes. He was stoned to death along with his accomplices (327 B.C.).

- *76. Πλείσταρχος Ἀντιπάτρου Born c. 350-40 B.C.
 Brother of Cassander (q.v.); in 313 B.C. he was in command of the garrison in Chalkis, when the city was occupied by Polemaios, the general of Antigonos. Appointed by his brother as the commander of the cavalry and the mercenaries during the siege of Athens. His name is mentioned in two Athenian inscriptions dated in 304/3 B.C. and a curse tablet of the same date, also from Athens, in which Κάσσανδρος, Εὐπόλεμος (q.v.) and Demetrios Phalereus were also named. Later he was in charge of the reinforcements sent by Cassander to Lysimachos, a mission that ended disastrously (302 B.C.). After Ipsos he received Cilicia and also Caria, as it is epigraphically proven, where, according to R.A. Billows, Εὐπόλεμος Πωτάλου (q.v.) was his general representing him until about 298 B.C. (later he was succeeded by him as the dynast of Caria). Inscriptions dated up to the 7th year of his rule, that ended in 294 B.C. (according to Billows) or c. 290 B.C. (according to Gregory) have been found in Sinuri (Mylasa), Hyllarima, Tralles, Euromos. His capital was presumably at Herakleia on Latmos that was renamed Pleistarcheia.

APPENDIX II

EXCLUDED PERSONS OR CATEGORIES OF PERSONS

I. EXCLUSIONS OF ETHNICS OF CITIES OR REGIONS

Ethnics of cities or regions not followed by a personal name are not included. Thus collective ethnics such as the Ὀρέσται mentioned in Delos, the Εὐρωπαῖοι and Κασσανδρεῖς in Argos etc., the Ἀκάνθιοι in Athens are omitted.¹ Another Κασσανδρ[---] is not included because most probably it stands not for the ethnic but for the name Κάσσανδρος.²

Persons with ethnics attested in inscriptions found in their own city, as e.g. Ἀργεσταῖοι,³ Βεροιαῖοι,⁴ Ἐδεσσαῖοι,⁵ a use of the ethnic occurring in the Roman period,⁶ have also been excluded.

Foreigners, usually victors in athletic competitions, who had received citizenship from numerous cities including Macedonian

2. IG XII,5 1069 line 6.

3. N. Vulić, Spomenik 71 (1931) no 88 and 98 (1948) no 363; see also Papazoglou, Villes 311 and nn. 15-17.

4. See e.g. Tataki, Beroea 128 no 239.

5. See e.g. Tataki, Edessa 30 no 10, 69 no 279, 47 no 128.

6. BullEpigr 1959, 434, 1965, 253, 1974, 330 and 458. The recently published decree of Pydna of the first 3rd of the 2nd century B.C. mentioning Πρωτέας Φιλίππου, Πυθναῖος, seems to add a new dimension to this use; see M. Bessios, "Μαρτυρίες Πύδνας. Τὸ ψήφισμα τοῦ Ἀπόλλωνος Δεκαδρῦου," Ancient Macedonia V,2 (Thessalonike 1993) 1117-19; Hatzopoulos, Institutions II 72-73 no 55.

ones, are not included;⁷ so also victors in athletic contests that took place in a Macedonian city.⁸

Some ethnics of Macedonian cities, dated after these cities had lost their independant status, have been explained as referring to homonymous cities elsewhere; thus Ἀρίστων Πελλαῖος⁹ and Παλλάδιος Παλλαδίου, Μεθωναῖος¹⁰ are not included.

Some further omissions connected with ethnics and also some corrections of ethnics (in alphabetical order) follow.

-Μακεδὼν Ἀργ[τεύς], attested on a funerary monument found in Attica, is a very doubtful reading and for this reason omitted.¹¹

-Αἰγαῖς, citizens of the city of Aigai of Asia Minor are not included.¹²

-Αἴνεια, one of the cities which contributed to the synoecism of Thessalonike, is represented in the lists of theorodokoi of Epidaurus and Delphi;¹³ the numerous epigraphically attested Αἴνιοι¹⁴ were citizens of the Thracian Αἴνος¹⁵ and have therefore not been included.

-Ἀμφίπολις: Φίλων, is not included because he is known only from an inscription found in Amphipolis;¹⁶ the other Amphipolitan mentioned in the same inscription Στρατοκλῆς (q.v.) is included because he is also known from a literary source.

-Ξένων followed by Ἀμφίπ[ολις] is not included since the latter has been interpreted as a personal name.¹⁷

7. As e.g. the Pergamene who became citizen of several cities, among them Thessalonike and Berga: IGR III 215.

8. As e.g. in IG IV 673 mentioning a victor in Potidaia; for others honoured for their victories in Thessalonike see IG VII 1856 and SEG 36 (1986) 258 line 16.

16. *SIG*³ 194.

17. SEG 2 (1924) 9 line 23; both have been included in LGPV II s.vv. nos 2 and 66.

-The Cretan Νέαρχος Ἀνδροτίμου (q.v.), a citizen of Amphipolis, is included as well as Ἀνδροσθένης Καλλιστράτου (q.v.), born on Thasos, and Λαομέδων and Ἐρίγυος, sons of Larichos, from Mytilene; their fathers however have not been included.

-Ἀσσαρα, read at the end of the list of Delphic theorodokoi has been corrected to Ἀβδαρα (=Ἀβδηρα) by M.B. Hatzopoulos;¹⁸ the theorodokoi of this city are therefore absent from this collection.

-Persons bearing the ethnic Δῖος are not citizens of the Macedonian city and have been excluded.¹⁹

-Εὐρωπός (ᾠρωπός) was also the name of cities in Syria²⁰ and Caria; the last was the home of Μῦς, Εὐρωπεύς²¹ who has been excluded. The ethnic Εὐρώπιος in Epirus appears to be local.²²

-Ἡμαθία: ethnics of regions are sometimes homonymous to those of cities although they were not used at the same time for the citizens of a region and for those of a city;²³ thus Ἡμαθία, earlier called Οἰσύμη,²⁴ is listed with the cities since it appears to have had the status of a city.

-Ἰχναῖος, the ethnic for one of the cities of Bottiaia Ichnai,²⁵ attested as an anthroponym in Amphipolis,²⁶ is not included although it is certainly an indication of the origin of the new citizens of this area after its annexation by Philip II.²⁷

-Καασαρσηνός, attested in Eastern Paeonia is not included since it does not necessarily belong to a Macedonian city.²⁸ Ἡρόδωρος Φ[--]κηνός who was honoured by the Athenians with exceptional honours for his services as an official of Antigonos and Demetrios²⁹ has an ethnic with a similar termination that need not be Macedonian;³⁰ he has not been included in this Prosopography.

-(Ἐορδαῖος) Κραννέστης³¹ and Κορμέσται³² refer to communities of Eordaia; only the first has been included.³³

-Μενδήσιος is the ethnic derived from the Egyptian city, so the philosopher Βῶλος has not been included.³⁴

-Olynthos: some of the persons included in the Prosopography of Olynthos were not Olynthians.³⁵

-Pella: Ἀρισταγόρας, an archon of the city Limyra of Lycia was not a Pellean and has not been included; Πελλαῖος, following his name in the genitive, has been interpreted as his patronymic.³⁶

-Περδύλιος, Περδυλία are most probably demotics and therefore have not been included.³⁷

-Pythoion: the two theorodokoi of Epidaurus are citizens of the Thessalian city and therefore have not been included.³⁸

-Thessalonike: Λούκιλλος Ταρραῖος, author of a book on Thessalonike, was from Crete³⁹ and does not belong to a Macedonian prosopography.

Following are some cities that present problems of homonymity:

-Ἀντιγονεῖς are citizens of one of these cities; two Antigoneiai are known in Macedonia.⁴⁰ However the three Ἀντιγονεῖς honoured as proxenoi and euergetai in Eretria have not been included because the early date of the decree excludes the possibility that it refers to any of the Macedonian cities.⁴¹

-Ἀπολλωνία: the Macedonian city is listed by Stephanus Byzantius as the third in a total of 25 homonymous cities;⁴² of those not included here we note one in Athens where the honoured Apolloniates was most probably a citizen of the homonymous city of Illyria as he is followed by a citizen of Epidamnus, another city of Illyria.⁴³ Also excluded are persons attested in papyri as Ἀπολλωνιάτης τῆς ἐπιγονῆς.⁴⁴

-Ἡράκλεια, Ἡράκλειον are also among the homonymous cities that can cause confusion as to whether the ethnic under consideration refers to one of the Macedonian cities or another elsewhere. The numerous and widely attested Ἡρακλεῶται or Ἡρακλειῶται could belong to any Herakleia –Stephanus Byzantius lists 23⁴⁵– or to Herakleion, also a Macedonian city. The numerous Ἡρακλειῶται buried in Attica⁴⁶ are not included, and actually the only attestation from a funerary monument that has been included is Δέξιος Ἡρακλειώτης, known from Pella.

-Μεθώνη of Pieria has now been distinguished from the homonymous city of Magnesia;⁴⁷ citizens of the latter, known from Delphi, have therefore been omitted.⁴⁸

-Νεάπολις was the name of two cities in Macedonia; the first was initially a Thasian colony, the second was in Paeonia.⁴⁹ Νεοπολίται or Νεαπολίται have been included although in their case, as with the Ἀπολλωνιᾶται and Ἡρακλειῶται, there are reservations on account of the existence of numerous homonymous cities. The Neapolitans of Delos⁵⁰ have not been included since they most probably originated from the Italian city; the same applies for those attested in Athens and in other places, if they are of the Roman period.⁵¹

-Στρατονικεῖς may have been citizens of several homonymous cities;⁵² they have not been included since they all seem to come from cities outside of Macedonia.⁵³

-Φύσκος (Φύσκαί, Φύσκα) was one more Macedonian city with homonyms in other parts of the Greek world.⁵⁴ None of the attested instances of the ethnic can be assigned to the Macedonian city.⁵⁵

Additional references to discussions of some more ethnics of cities such as Σίρρα, Σέρραι,⁵⁶ Σκύδρα,⁵⁷ Χάραξ and Χαράκωμα⁵⁸ might be useful to the reader of this section. In addition it should also be noted that Κυρρήστης or Κυρρέστης (Κυρρηῆστις for the feminine) and Κυρραῖος (Κυρραία) are the ethnics of the city Kyrrhos;⁵⁹ the reading Κυρρηστής has also been proposed.⁶⁰ As for the spelling of Μόρρυλος or Μόρυλλος most probably the first is the correct one since it is attested in inscriptions found in the city;⁶¹ the second is found only in the list of the Delphic theorodokoi.

Corrections to earlier readings have resulted in the omission of a variety of persons such as Ξενοτέλης ἐν Βάλλαις,⁶² the "daughter" of the king of the Paeonians,⁶³ Αὐρ(ήλιος) Ἀγρίππας, Κ[ασσανδ]ρεὺς who has been corrected to Καισ[αρ]εὺς etc.⁶⁴

Oropos,⁶⁷ Temenos and his sons Argaios and Archelaos⁶⁸ the Paeonian Mydon killed by Achilles,⁶⁹ the "Olynthian" Μενεκράτης⁷⁰ and other mythical or heroic personalities. Fictional persons whose names have been bestowed on them for a particular reason have also been omitted.⁷¹

From the members of the dynasties of the Hellenistic kingdoms the Attalids⁷² and members of their families, e.g. Athenaios,⁷³ are excluded, because they were not of Macedonian descent, as also are the kings of the Indian kingdoms e.g. Πευκόλαος and Ἀμύντας⁷⁴ and others, e.g. the king of Commagene Σᾶμος Πολεμαίου, although his name is typically Macedonian.⁷⁵

The glamour of the ethnic Μακεδών resulted in its use by members of the Ptolemaic or Seleucid entourage, even when their authentic place of origin was well known; such was the case of the Cypriot Themison in the reign of Antiochos II.⁷⁶ Naturally such cases have not been included. Some other relevant testimonia, also not included, are those of Ἀλέξανδρος Μακεδών as e.g. at an inscription of the time of the Severi that has been interpreted as a reflection of the legend of Alexander.⁷⁷

Πολύκλειτος, Προμαθίων Μυρμιδόνοϛ and Κλεινὼ Ἀδμήτου, or Δάμας Ζήνωνοϛ perhaps an Arethousian, have not been included.⁷⁸

Among other exclusions we note Ἀντίπατροϛ whose ethnic was erroneously read as Μακεδών,⁷⁹ Μήδιοϛ Ὁξυθέμιδοϛ not a Macedonian, as had been supported, but from Larissa,⁸⁰ Πετραῖοϛ, the Friend of Philip V, also a Thessalian etc.⁸¹

Attestations of the ethnic Μακεδών when the name is missing are included with the exception of those found in Egypt; "Macedonians" without names attested in papyri are omitted.⁸²

Μακεδών used as a personal name and not as an ethnic as e.g. in the case of Αὐφίδιοϛ Μακεδών⁸³ is not included; the same applies for Μακεδονικός and other names derived from Μακεδών, as well as for cognomina derived from the name of a Macedonian city.⁸⁴

Slaves of Macedonians attested abroad are omitted, although I included them in my previously published Prosopographies;⁸⁵ some slaves however, usually known from manumission documents, are included if they are given a Macedonian ethnic. Other probable slaves, such as Pelignas, have been omitted.⁸⁶

82. If the name of an individual is missing there is a difference in historical value between a Macedonian honoured in a Greek city and a Μακεδών mentioned in an Egyptian private document; thus e.g. the Macedonians listed in Launey 1187-88 and those preserving letters only from the middle of their name as [-]ιχ[-], Μακεδών: Launey 327, 1186 are omitted; also omitted are cases as e.g. [οἱ τ]ρεῖς Μακεδ[όνες]: SB V 8035B line 9 = XIV 11410B line 9, where it is not certain to which of the names listed it refers.

Persons in the Roman army referring to cities or areas of Macedonia as their place of origin had originally been included in this as in earlier Prosopographies;⁸⁷ they were finally omitted as forming an entirely different category of evidence.⁸⁸ Roman officials, known usually from honorary decrees erected after their service in Macedonia was completed, mentioned in their cursus honorum,⁸⁹ are also omitted.

Finally bishops and other church officials of early Christian times known from literary sources have been omitted.

APPENDIX III

BRIEF DISCUSSION OF NAMES

We did not consider necessary to include all known attestations of names of typical Macedonian character well documented in Macedonia, but also found in Thessaly and elsewhere, very often in Egypt, not accompanied by the ethnic Μακεδών or an ethnic of a Macedonian city; their diffusion to non-Macedonians especially of late date does not allow us to consider them as a proof of Macedonian origin. However, some relatively early examples, even without the ethnic, have been included selectively. Delicate decisions had to be taken according to multiple criteria, the evaluation of which may inevitably seem subjective if not arbitrary. The bibliography supplied here on some of them is intended to mitigate some of the resulting disadvantages and can serve as a guide for the reader who wishes to explore their distribution and form a personal opinion.

Ἀδδαῖος, Ἀδαῖος is such a typical Macedonian name found also in Thessaly and elsewhere¹ and also in Egypt without the ethnic Μακεδών.² Ἀδεία belongs to the same category;³ however Ἀδεία Ἀντιόχου and more Macedonian names attested in Dura Europos without an ethnic have not been included.⁴ The same applies also for the name Ἀδμητος.⁵ Although Ἀνδρόνικος is a well known name in Macedonia⁶ individuals of late date, like the epistates of Antiochos II, have not been included.⁷ Ἀρριδαῖος is a well documented Macedonian name;⁸ the attestations listed are not exhaustive.⁹ Βάλαγρος, Βάλακρος is also a well documented and widely attested Macedonian name;¹⁰ however some of its later attestations have not been included.¹¹ Persons named Βερενίκη, as well as Ἀρσινόη, frequently attested in Alexandria, were either Macedonians or members of the court;¹² with the exception of Βερενίκη Ἀδαίου, who is included because of her patronymic, the only others listed in this Prosopography are those related to the Ptolemies, or some other Hellenistic dynasty. There are no epigraphical attestations of Βίλιππος, said to be the Macedonian form of Φίλιππος,¹³ so it is not found in our lists. Βίλος¹⁴ is attested in Macedonia and has therefore Hoffmann's interpretation of Ὀρόντης, Ὀρόντας, as a Macedonian name,³³ and included Ὀρόντας Νικαγόρα, the earliest attestation cited by I. Russu.³⁴ Πάνταυχος, a name well documented in Macedonia, is not exclusively borne by

-1. Hoffmann 190-91; Russu 163-64; Fraser, Samothrace II, 1 45-47; Tataki, Beroea 344-45, 408, 413.

Macedonians.³⁵ Περίλαος is a well known Macedonian name³⁶ and there seems no doubt that Ἀντίπατρος Περιλάου Δερβήτης, whom we have had to omit on account of his foreign ethnic, was of Macedonian origin.³⁷ The same is true of Πλείσταρχος, who bears the ethnic Δοκιμεύς.³⁸ Πευκόλαος as well as Πευκέστας also belong to the Macedonian onomasticon and both are known in Egypt, as well as Πεύκαλλος not yet attested in Macedonia;³⁹ they are not followed by an ethnic and therefore have been omitted. Πολεμαῖος is one more Macedonian name attested in Egypt (without the ethnic);⁴⁰ these and other late occurrences of the name, most probably belonging to settlers of Macedonian origin, have not been included.⁴¹ Related to it is Πτολεμαῖος, frequent name in Macedonia and one of the Macedonian names that became popular during the Hellenistic period.⁴² Πρεπέλαος is another Macedonian name whose attestations in Egypt and elsewhere without the ethnic Μακεδών have not been included in their entirety.⁴³

Persons bearing the dynastic name Ἀργαῖος, always without an ethnic in Egypt,⁴⁴ were excluded. Κλεοπάτρα,⁴⁵ is another dynastic name; we have omitted the daughters of the latest Ptolemies.⁴⁶

Some names without ethnics have been included because their bearers are listed with other Macedonians, as are Δαδάμας, attested only in Delos,⁴⁷ and Μήτρων, not a Macedonian name.⁴⁸ We did not however include Κίσσος (Plut., Alex. 41) that does not have to be the name of a Macedonian.⁴⁹

From the other names in our lists we note Δίης and not Διῆς, according to O. Masson,⁵⁰ not exclusively Macedonian, and Λεύκαρος, a rare name attested in various places of the Greek world; some of its attestations not included here could also refer to Macedonians.⁵¹

Πατρᾷς has been taken as a Macedonian name,⁵² but names ending in -ᾱς are well known in Macedonia, as elsewhere especially at a later date.⁵³ Other names not included are: Βαλλίων that has, most probably with good reason, been classified as a Macedonian name,⁵⁴ but is not attested in Macedonia or for a Macedonian;

Βερέκκας, attested only in Thessaly although its formation is recognized in the Macedonian onomasticon;⁵⁵ the same applies to Βίρρουν⁵⁶ and Δρεβέλας,⁵⁷ most probably a Macedonian name, attested only in Thessaly.⁵⁸

We have included Ἀμακτύων⁵⁹ (or Ἀμακτίων⁶⁰), the commander of the royal cavalry under Seleucos II, with a very rare name, although it is not necessarily a Macedonian name; on the contrary Σποράκης that, in the oldest reference to the name was not borne by a Macedonian, has not been included as it does not seem to belong to the Macedonian onomasticon;⁶¹ Κλόνιος, not known elsewhere, is mentioned by Diodoros along with Ἀντίπατρος and Ἀέροπος as leaders of note who seized Laodikeia in 128 B.C.; the name was discussed by O. Hoffmann and subsequently included in I. Russu's work.⁶² He and the other two commanders mentioned, bearers of better documented Macedonian names, have been omitted because their origin is uncertain and they are of late date. Ἀρτίμας, frequently attested in Delos and classified by I. Russu with the Macedonian names,⁶³ does not appear in our lists because according to O. Masson it is Asiatic.⁶⁴

The onomasticon formed by our lists includes some unique or very rare names: Ἐπόκιλλος, borne by a Macedonian, seems to be unique;⁶⁵ Ἐργεύς, a very rare name, attested as the patronymic of a

Macedonian in Egypt, is yet unknown in Macedonia;⁶⁶ Καραδύσης seems to be unique but not specifically Macedonian; for its inclusion in Appendix I we followed M. Launey, taking into consideration P.M. Fraser's dating;⁶⁷ unique also appears to be Καράρων or Κιράρων, the name originally given to Κοῖνος (the son of Caranos);⁶⁸ Λόβιος, considered by some to be a Macedonian name, is included although as yet unattested in Macedonia;⁶⁹ Παντορδάνας, is included as a derivative of the unique name Παντόρδανος, although it is not followed by the ethnic;⁷⁰ Πώταλος is a unique name discussed by O. Hoffmann who relates it with names of Thessaly and Boeotia;⁷¹ Σαβατταρᾶς, is also unique with obscure linguistic connections;⁷² finally Στορέσας is most probably unique and is borne by a Macedonian in Egypt.⁷³

I. GENERAL INDEX

Macedonia, Macedonian have been partly indexed; names of kings are indexed only if they appear in the text and not when used for the dating of an entry. The system used for the transliteration of personal names and toponyms is inevitably mixed; we kept those established in English by long usage but avoided latinized forms which are followed mainly for names appearing in Latin sources (see Index IV). For toponyms see also Index II.
